Trust.

1. A trust, in the modern and confined sense of the word (a), is a confidence reposed in a person with respect to property of which he has possession or over which he can exercise a power to the intent that he may hold the property or exercise the power for the benefit of some other person or object (b).

(a) The word "trust" was regarded in Blackstone's time as including certain transactions cognisable in a court of law, such as deposits, bailments, and implied undertakings to account for money received to another's use (3 Bl. Com. 432). "Wherever persons agree concerning any particular subject, that, in a court of equity as against the party himself and any claiming under him voluntarily or with notice, raises a trust" (Legard v. Hodges (1792), 1 Ves. 477, per Lord THURLOW, L.C., at p. 478). In reference to real estate, and for the purpose of the Statute of Uses (27 Hen. 8, c. 10), it may, if the context so requires or admits, be construed as synonymous with "use" (1 Cru. Dig., tit. 12, Trust, s. 1 (2); Bushell v. Burland (1708), Holt (K. B.), 733, 736; Altham (Lord) v. Anglesea (Lord) (1709), 11 Mod. Rep. 210, per HOLT, C.J., at p. 211; Burgess v. Wheate, A.-G. v. Wheate (1759), 1 Eden, 177, per Lord MANSFIELD, C.J., at p. 217; Doe d. Terry v. Collier (1809), 11 East, 377, 380; Re Brooke, Brooke v. Brooke, [1894] 1 Ch. 43, per CHITTY, J., at p. 48). The Statute of Uses (27 Hen. 8, c. 10) united the estates of the legal tenant in fee simple and of the cestui que use; but a redivision of them was effected by limiting the use to the feoffee, who was declared a trustee, and then, there being one use which the statute executed and another which it did not, trusts succeeded uses. For as there could not be a use upon a use it took the name of a trust, and as the law would not meddle with it equity did so (Burgess v. Wheate, A.-G. v. Wheate, supra, per CLARKE, M.R., at p. 194; and see title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATTELS REAL, Vol. XXIV., pp. 271 et seq.).

(b) Co. Litt. 272 b; Burgess v. Wheate, A.-G. v. Wheate, supra, per HENLEY, Lord Keeper, at p. 240; Wilson v. Bury (Lord) (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 518, C. A., per BRETT, L.J., at pp. 530, 531; Dooby v. Watson (1888), 39 Ch. D. 178, per KEKEWICH, J., at pp. 181, 182; Re Barney, Barney v. Barney, [1892] 2 Ch. 265, per KEKEWICH, J., at p. 272; Re Williams, Williams v. Williams, [1897] 2 Ch. 12, C. A., per LINDLEY, L.J., at pp. 18, 19. A trust is the binding of the conscience of one to the intention of another (Bacon, Reading upon the Statute of Uses, p. 9). An obligation to do an act with respect to property creates a trust (Fleeming v. Howden (1868), L. R. 1 Sc. & Div. 372, per Lord WESTBURY, at p. 383). The object of the trust is generally some person or persons; but it may be some private or public purpose; see title CHARITIES, Vol. IV., pp. 106 et seq., 114 et seq. A guardianship is a trust (Beaufort (Duke) v. Berty (1721), 1 P. Wms. 703, per Lord MACCLESFIELD, L.C., at p. 705; Mathew v. Brise (1851), 14 Beav. 341, per ROMILLY, M.R., at p. 345; and see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., pp. 117, 121 et seq.). An agency is not in itself a trust (Cave v. Mackenzie (1877), 46 L. J. (Ch.) 564), but may in certain circumstances involve a trust; see pp. 58, 206, post; title AGENCY, Vol. I., pp. 157, 182, 184. The existence of a contractual relationship, such as, for instance, that of banker and customer (Foley v. Hill (1848), 2 H. L. Cas. 28), does not constitute a trust (Ferguson v. Wilson (1866), 2 Ch. App. 77, per TURNER, L.J., at pp. 87, 88; Wilson v. Bury (Lord), supra, at pp. 530, 531; Soar v. Ashwell, [1893] 2 Q. B. 390, C. A., per Lord ESHER, M.R., at p. 393). It is an equitable obligation or, in other words, is enforceable only in a court in which equity is administered (c).

2. The person in whom the confidence is reposed is called a trustee (d), and the person for whose benefit the trust is to be exercised is called a cestui que trust (e), or sometimes a beneficiary (f).

The trustee is possessed of the property or power in a fiduciary capacity, and stands in a fiduciary relation to the cestui que trust (g). A person may be at the same time trustee and one of the cestuis que trust (h).

3. The property affected by the confidence is called the trust property or trust estate. It is usually in the legal ownership or under the legal control of the trustee (i). The cestui

As to powers in the nature of trusts, see p. 17, post; title POWERS, Vol. XXIII., pp. 69 et seq. The trustee must have the legal possession or control of the property, which would be complete but for the equitable interest therein of the cestui que trust (Re Barney, Barney v. Barney, [1892] 2 Ch. 265, 272, 273, 276).

(d) 21 Vin. Abr. 508 et seq. A trustee is a person holding the legal title to property under an express or implied agreement to apply it and the income arising from it to the use and benefit of another person (Wilson v. Bury (Lord) (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 518, C. A., per BRETT, L.J., at pp. 530, 531). In a broad sense every person who has the legal ownership of property in which another person has a beneficial interest is a trustee for that person (Story, s. 964, 2nd ed. (1892), pp. 626, 627). But funds in the hands of public officials for distribution among certain persons are not trust funds of which they are trustees for such persons (Grenville-Murray v. Clarendon (Earl) (1869), L. R. 9 Eq. 11; Kinloch v. Secretary of State for India in Council (1880), 15 Ch. D. 1, C. A.). (i) Re Barney, Barney v. Barney, supra, at pp. 272, 273, 276. A trustee may have merely an equitable estate in property which is legally vested in another person (Head v. Teynham (Lord) (1783), 1 Cox, Eq. Cas. 57; Poole v. Pass (1839), 1 Beav. 600; Knight v. Bowyer (1857), 23 Beav. 609, per ROMILLY, M.R., at p. 635; and see title EQUITY, Vol. XIII., p. 155, note (m)); but there can be no trust where there is not a legal estate in the trust property co-extensive with it (*Burgess v. SUB-SECT. 2.—Classification.

4. Trusts are either (1) express, which are created by the actual terms of some instrument or declaration (l), or (2) constructive, or implied, which arise when property, to which no express trust is for the time being attached, is acquired or held by a person in circumstances which render him bound in equity to hold it in trust for the benefit of some other person or object as cestui que trust or beneficiary (m).

Express,
implied, or constructive
trusts.

5. Express trusts may be either (1) executed, or (2) executory. A trust is executed in the technical sense where the terms of the trust are designated by the instrument or declaration creating it (n), even though the creator directs a settlement to be executed embodying the designated provisions (o). A trust is executory in the technical sense where the instrument or declaration by which it is created directs the subsequent execution of an instrument

D. 614, per FRY, J., at p. 617; and see title EQUITY, Vol. XIII., pp. 154, 155. Where there is no actual evidence of an express trust, but the court considers that the circumstances necessarily point to its having been created, it is called a presumptive trust (Cook v. Fountain (1676), 3 Swan. 585, per Lord NOTTINGHAM, L.C., at p. 591).

A constructive trust is a trust to be made out by circumstances (Soar v. Ashwell, [1893] 2 Q. B. 390, C. A., per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 396). Trusts are neither created nor implied by law to defeat the intentions of donors or settlors. They are created or implied, or held to result in favour of donors or settlors, in order to carry out and give effect to the true intentions of the donors or settlors, whether expressed or implied (Standing v. Bowring (1885), 31 Ch. D. 282, C. A., per LINDLEY, L.J., at p. 289; and see pp. 12 et seq., post). The law never implies, and the court never presumes, a trust unless it is absolutely necessary to do so (Cook v. Fountain, supra, at pp. 591, 592).

(n) Glenorchy (Lord) v. Bosville (1733), Cas. temp. Talb. 3, per Lord TALBOT, L.C., at p. 19. Generally, a trust is executed when the creator of it has been his own conveyancer in defining it (Franks v. Price (1839), 3 Beav. 182; Egerton v. Brownlow (Earl) (1853), 4 H. L. Cas. 1, 61, 210; Doncaster v. Doncaster (1856), 3 K. & J. 26; Fullerton v. Martin (1860), 1 Drew. & Sm. 31; De Havilland v. De Saumarez, De Havilland v. Bingham (1865), 14 W. R. 118; Re Nelley's Trusts (1877), 26 W. R. 88). A trust or bequest of personal estate "to be enjoyed with and go with the title" to a peerage is executed and not executory (Re Johnston, Cockerell v. Essex (Earl) (1884), 26 Ch. D. 538).

defining the trust and does not itself define with absolute precision the terms of that instrument (p).

6. A precatory trust is a trust created by precatory words, such as expressions of confidence, request, or desire that property will or shall be applied for the benefit of a definite person or object, where these words are construed in equity as imperatively constituting a trust (q).

Secret trusts.

7. A secret trust is created where property is in law given to a person either absolutely or upon an indefinite trust, but there has been an undertaking by him or an understanding between him and the donor, not clothed with the requisite formalities for the creation of a legal trust, that it shall be applied for the benefit of some other person or object (r).

Constructive,
resulting,
and other implied
trusts.

8. Constructive or implied trusts may be subdivided into (1) constructive trusts, where property not otherwise subject to a trust becomes by the law trust property (s); (2) resulting trusts, where the law imposes on trust property a trust not expressed at the time when the trust was created (t); and (3) trusts implied from contractual or other relations subsisting between parties (u).

(p) Glenorchy (Lord) v. Bosville (1733), Cas. temp. Talb. 3; Bagshaw v. Spencer (1748), 1 Wils. 238; and see pp. 22 et seq., post. In one sense all trusts are executory, since they have to be executed or carried out by the trustee (Bellamy v. Burrow (1735), Cas. temp. Talb. 97; Jervoise v. Northumberland (Duke) (1820), 1 Jac. & W. 559, per Lord ELDON, L.C., at pp. 570 et seq.; Egerton v. Brownlow (Earl) (1853), 4 H. L. Cas. 1, per Lord St. LEONARDS, at pp. 61, 210). In some cases it is a doubtful point whether a trust is executed or executory (Jervoise v. Northumberland (Duke), supra, at pp. 570 et seq.). In all cases of executory trusts something is left to the judgment of the trustees (Stanley v. Lennard (1758), 1 Eden, 87, per HENLEY, Lord Keeper, at p. 95).

(q) Knight v. Knight (1840), 3 Beav. 148, per Lord LANGDALE, M.R., at pp. 171 et seq.; see pp. 13 et seq., post. The expression "precatory trust" is a roundabout way of saying that the court finds that there is a trust, although the trust is not expressed as such, but by words of prayer or suggestion (Re Sanson, Sanson v. Turner (1896), 12 T. L. R. 142, per CHITTY, J.). It is in fact a misleading nickname (Re Williams, Williams v. Williams, [1897] 2 Ch. 12, C. A., per RIGBY, L.J., at p. 27).

A person affected with a constructive trust becomes a constructive trustee (Soar v. Ashwell, supra, at p. 393). This term is also applied to a stranger who by his conduct becomes affected with an express trust, and the trust so affecting him is sometimes called a constructive trust (Barnes v. Addy (1874), 9 Ch. App. 244, per Lord SELBORNE, L.C., at p. 251; Soar v. Ashwell, supra, per KAY, L.J., at pp. 400, 405). It has, however, been suggested that in such circumstances the trust remains an express trust and that the stranger who by his conduct has become affected by it is, more properly speaking, an express trustee de son tort (Soar v. Ashwell, supra, per Lord ESHER, M.R., at p. 394).

Any person or corporation (a) capable at law or in equity of alienating to any extent property or an interest in property, either inter vivos or, in the case of an individual, by a testamentary instrument, is to the same extent capable of creating a trust in that property or interest, or of disposing thereof in trust, either inter vivos or, in the case of an individual, by a testamentary instrument (b). 10. Any person or corporation capable at law or in equity of taking and holding to any extent property or an interest in property either by a transaction operating inter vivos or by a testamentary disposition is to the same extent capable of taking and holding a beneficial interest as cestui que trust or beneficiary under a trust of that property or interest (c). Moreover, so far as is permitted by the law against perpetuities (d) and by considerations of public policy (e), the interposition of a trustee enables trusts to be created in favour of persons not yet in existence and objects incapable of taking a benefit under a direct gift (f). Cestui que trust or beneficiaries.

11. Subject to the law against perpetuities (g), property may be devised in trust for a person in fee simple or absolutely, with an executory devise or limitation in trust in favour of some other person or persons on the happening of a specific contingency (h). Executory devises and limitations.

(a) Except so far as by statute or otherwise legally restrained, a corporation has the same power of disposing of property as a private individual (*Colchester Corporation v. The person enabled by law to declare a trust of property is the beneficial owner of it (Tierney v. Wood (1854), 19 Beav. 330, per ROMILLY, M.R., at pp. 335, 336). In the construction of trusts the courts of equity adopt the rules of law applicable to legal estates (21 Vin. Abr., tit. Trust (A.), (D.); 8 Bac. Abr., tit. Mode of declaration.

12. A trust may be created inter vivos or by will (k).

A declaration of trust of real estate must be made or proved by a writing signed by the person who creates it (l). The trust need not be constituted by the writing; it is sufficient if the writing is evidence of the fact of the trust (m). The writing must, however, show its terms and not merely its existence (a). A writing is not necessary to support a trust which is actually in course of being carried out by the person alleged to be a trustee (b); nor will the absence of a writing enable a person who knows that land was conveyed to him as a trustee to claim it as his own (c). Similarly, in the case of partnership property the absence of writing is immaterial (d). A declaration after bankruptcy is effectual if the trust existed before (e).

A trust of personal estate inter vivos may be declared either in writing (f) or by parol (g).

13. A person or corporation capable of disposing of property or of an interest therein by way of trust (h) may at any time create a trust thereof by a declaration made in the proper legal mode (i) to the effect that it shall be thenceforth held in trust for a specified person or object (k). A declaration of trust of real property by a married woman made with the formalities required by the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (l), is a disposition by her within that Act (m), which binds the property as against her heir (a). other hand, a declaration of trust by a tenant in tail of real property is not such an assurance as under the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (b), will bar his estate tail therein (c).

14. A declaration of trust in writing of personal chattels without transfer, if it otherwise falls within the terms of the Bills of Sale Act, 1878 (d), is a bill of sale within the meaning of that Act (e).

15. On a transfer of property or of an interest in property, which of itself would vest the beneficial ownership thereof in the transferee, the declaration of trust may be made by the instrument of transfer, if any, or by another instrument taking effect contemporaneously with the instrument of transfer, or, in the case of a transfer of personal estate inter vivos, by a contemporaneous parol declaration (f).

16. Where a transfer of property is made to a person in such a manner or in such circumstances that he is thereby constituted a trustee thereof for the disposer and not the absolute owner, the disposer may at any time afterwards declare a specific trust of the property (g).

(ii.) Declaratory Words.

17. A trust can be created by any language which is clear enough to show an intention to create it (h). In order to create a trust there must be (1) a declaration which is or can be construed as imperative in its terms; (2) a designation of the subject-matter or property to be affected by it within the limits permitted by law; and (3) a designation of the object or the person or persons to be benefited by it within the limits permitted by law (i).

18. In declaring a trust the word usually and technically employed is "trust," or, more rarely, "use" or "confidence" (k). A trust may, however, be created by the general tenor of an instrument without the use of these words (l). When the creator of the trust is to be the trustee, any expressions will suffice from which it is clear that the party using them considers himself a trustee and adopts that character (m). A promise to declare a trust may be sufficient (n); but a promise or an expression of intention, or to give an imperfect gift, is not effectual as a declaration of trust (o). In case of doubt the contemporaneous and subsequent acts of the settlor may be looked at (p).

19. In testamentary instruments a trust may be created by words intimating a request (q), entreaty (r), recommendation (s),

SECT. 2.

Express Trusts.

Desire as to employment of a person.

Language negating trust.

Trusts by imposition of a condition.

Trust by creation of a charge.

word "trust" or an express declaration of trust in a will is construed as merely precatory or recommendatory (l).

20. A direction or desire or recommendation in a will that a particular person shall be employed as agent or in some other capacity in connexion with the testator's estate does not create a trust in his favour (m).

21. A trust will not be imposed where the language of the disposer expressly negatives his intention to impose a trust (n).

22. Where property is given to a person upon condition that he does a certain act or confers a certain benefit on another person, the condition may constitute a trust if it is directed to be, or must necessarily be, performed and satisfied out of the property, and consequently imposes a fiduciary obligation in respect of the property (o); but it will not be construed as a trust if this is not the case and the condition merely imposes a collateral duty (p). Similarly, a devise of land upon condition of paying a sum of money or an annuity does not create a trust, though it may create a charge (q).

23. A charge does not in itself create a trust (r), but it may do so if it is coupled with other trusts or the context otherwise so requires (s). Conversely a trust may amount merely to a charge (t).

24. Where a person, in terms which import a duty to exercise the power, is empowered to apply property for the benefit of such members of a specified class of beneficiaries as he in his discretion thinks fit, and there is no gift over in the event of his not exercising the power, a trust is created in favour of the class; and the whole class, if and so far as the trustee does not exercise his discretion, takes the property in equal shares (a). The power does not, however, assume the nature of a trust if there is a gift over in the event of its not being exercised (b), or if the language does not intimate an intention to make the exercise of the power a duty, or to benefit the class otherwise than by the exercise of the power (c).

A power given by will to trustees to confer a benefit on a person in an event which virtually takes place in the testator's lifetime may confer the benefit on that person (d).

(iii.) Designation of Subject-matter or Property.

SECT. 2.

Express Trusts.

Trust of residue of a fund.

Trust of future fund.

Certainty of objects.

A trust of the residue of a fund after a gift thereof of an undefined amount for an object which for any cause fails will be an effectual trust of the whole fund (h).

26. A trust may be declared of a fund contingently on the fund subsequently coming into existence (i).

(iv.) Designation of Objects or Persons to be Benefited.

27. Except where the objects are charitable, in which case some latitude is allowed (j), the objects or persons to be benefited by a trust must be expressly designated (k), or so defined that they are capable of being ascertained (l). Otherwise the trust is void for uncertainty (m), and there is a resulting trust (n).

936). Where a fund is given in trust as to a part, the amount of which is capable of being ascertained, for an object which fails, and as to the remainder for another object, the gift is held to fail as to the part but to be good as to the remainder (Mitford v. Reynolds (1842), 1 Ph. 185; Re Vaughan, Vaughan v. Thomas (1886), 33 Ch. D. 187; and in the case of charitable trusts, see title CHARITIES, Vol. IV., pp. 148 et seq.). 28. Where several objects are designated, a discretion may be given to the trustees as to which shall be benefited and in what proportions (o).

29. Trustees may be given a discretion as to the mode in which a designated object or person shall be benefited (p). If they fail to exercise the discretion through inability to do so or otherwise, the object or person nevertheless takes under the trust (a).

30. Trustees may be given power to vary the object or person to be benefited by the trust (b). Where they have an absolute discretion as to the conversion of the trust property either from realty into personality or from personality into realty, their exercise or non-exercise of the discretion may affect the respective rights to the trust property of the real or personal representatives of a beneficiary who dies while the trust is subsisting (c).

SECT. 2.

Express Trusts.

Discretion of trustees as to objects.

Discretion as to mode of benefit.

Power of trustees to vary object.

T. 955, reversed on another point, [1914] 1 Ch. 663, C. A.), or for such charitable or religious institutions as the trustees may select (Grimond (or Macintyre) v. Grimond, [1905] A. C. 124, 603), or "for missionary purposes" (Scott v. Brownrigg (1881), 9 L. R. Ir. 246), or "for the Lord's work" (Re King's Estate (1888), 21 L. R. Ir. 273), or of money "to be given in private charity" (Ommaney v. Butcher (1823), Turn. & R. 260), is void for uncertainty. A trust is void where the directions are so vague that it cannot be said what the testator meant, so that he has in effect given to someone else power to make a will for him instead of making a will for himself (Grimond (or Macintyre) v. Grimond, supra, per Lord HALSBURY, L.C., at p. 126); but a trust for such charities and other public purposes as lawfully may be in a named parish is good (Dolan v. Macdermot (1868), 3 Ch. App. 676). It seems to follow from Gott v. Nairne (1876), 3 Ch. D. 278, that a trust of a sum of money wherewith to buy an advowson and present "such fit and proper person as" the trustees may in their uncontrolled discretion select, is valid. ## SECT. 2.

Express
Trusts.

Discretion as to wasting securities.

31. Trustees may be given a discretion as to the retention or conversion of trust property of a wasting nature (d). In that case the mode in which they exercise their discretion may affect the respective interests of persons beneficially interested in the trust property for life and in remainder (e).

(v.) Complete Constitution of a Trust.

Immaterial
omissions.

32. A trust may be completely constituted without communication thereof to the trustee or to the cestui que trust (f).

A trust is not affected by the fact that no trustee is named, or by the fact that the trustee who is named either refuses or is unable, through death or otherwise, to act (g).

A trust of property does not depend on the immediate existence of a legal estate in a trustee to support it (h).

A settlement of a policy of assurance is complete without notice to the assurance office (i), and a settlement of an equitable interest in stock is complete without notice to the trustees (k).

Failure to transfer immaterial.

33. The fact that the creator of a trust does not transfer to the trustee the legal estate in the trust property which he subsequently gets in is immaterial (l). Similarly, an assignment of debts to trustees is a complete constitution of the trust, although there is no assignment or delivery to them of the securities for the debts (m). The disposer must not, however, retain a control over the property which is inconsistent with an intention to create a trust (a).

SECT. 2.
Express
Trusts.

SUB-SECT. 4.—Secret Trusts.

34. Where a person either under a legal instrument inter vivos or under a testamentary instrument is given property either absolutely or upon an indefinite trust, but there has been some parol or written undertaking or understanding between him and the disposer of the property, not clothed with the requisite formalities for creating a trust in law, that he will hold it in trust for some particular person or object, that trust, if it can take effect (b), is enforced in equity on the ground that his failure to perform it would be an act of fraud (c); if, on the other hand, the trust is for an object which is prohibited by law, the gift is void (d). Where, however, the intended trust, though not actually void in law, cannot take effect (e), or is not communicated to the donee, or is not assented to by the donee during the lifetime of the disposer, or, in the case of a transaction inter vivos, before the donee has otherwise lawfully dealt with the property, the following rules apply, namely:—(1) If the gift is to the donee ostensibly for his own benefit (f) he is regarded both in law and in equity as entitled to the property, so that if he applies it for the benefit of the object secretly indicated by the disposer, he does so as a voluntary gift from himself (g); and (2) if the gift is to the donee ostensibly on an indefinite trust (h) or on terms which in the circumstances create a resulting trust in favour of the disposer (i), he holds the property in trust for the disposer or the heir or next-of-kin or residuary devisees or legatees of the disposer according to the circumstances and the nature of the property.

Acceptance
by tacit acquiescence.

35. A person accepts a secret trust if he silently acquiesces in it when it is communicated to him (k).

Gift to several on secret understanding with one.

36. Where the property is given to more than one on an undertaking or understanding with one of them that it shall be held in trust for some particular person or object, the question whether the interest of the other donee under the gift is affected depends upon the time when the undertaking or understanding was entered into. Both donees are bound if the undertaking or understanding was entered into on behalf of both previously to or at the time of the making of the gift, although it was without the knowledge or consent of the other donee (l); but it is otherwise if the undertaking or understanding is entered into by one only after the gift has been made (m). The fact of the gift being to the two as tenants in common, or otherwise separately, strengthens the case in favour of the interest of the other not being affected (n).

SUB-SECT. 5.—Executory Trusts.

Construction.

37. An executory trust, where the declaration of trust is in the form of a direction to create by a subsequent instrument certain trusts not defined with absolute precision by the disposer (o), is not, like an executed trust (p), construed according to the legal effect of the language used, but is construed so as best to give effect to the apparent intention of the disposer (q).

38. An executory trust may be declared for an object not at the time in existence (r).

SECT. 2.
Express
Trusts.

39. Where the disposer has clearly contemplated a succession of beneficial interests in the trust property, or a strict settlement, equity either directs the limitation of life interests with remainders in tail or in fee simple or absolutely, as the case may be, notwithstanding that the words used in declaring the trust legally imply the immediate limitation to the first beneficiaries of an estate in fee simple (s) or in tail (t), or an absolute interest (a); or otherwise directs a strict settlement so far as the lawful methods of conveyancing will admit (b).

Object need not be in esse.
Limitation
of interests.

40. In directing a settlement to carry out an executory trust, equity modifies any inapt provisions in the trust as defined by the disposer (c).

Modification of inapt provisions.

41. Where the limitations directed by the disposer, if construed according to their legal effect, would create an illegal perpetuity (d), equity, in the case of an executory trust, directs such a limitation of interests as shall most closely approximate to his expressed intention without infringing the rule against perpetuities (e).

Limitation

perpetuity.

Where the assistance of the trustees, which is ultimately the assistance of the court of equity having jurisdiction in the matter, is necessary to complete the limitations expressed in the declaration of trust, the fact that the limitations were not completely declared by the disposer is sufficient evidence of his intention that they should be further modelled; but where they have been completely declared by the disposer, there is no authority for interfering and making them different from what they would be at law (Austen v. Taylor (1759), 1 Eden, 361, per HENLEY, Lord Keeper, at pp. 368, 369).

SECT. 2.

Express Trusts.

Addition of ancillary trusts and powers.

Trusts, when valid.

42. In creating the trusts directed by the disposer, equity directs the insertion of ancillary trusts and powers not expressly contemplated by him (f).

SUB-SECT. 6.—Considerations Affecting the Validity of Trusts.

43. A trust in order to be valid must not only be effectually created, but must also conform to the principles of law which regulate the disposition of property.

The question whether a trust is lawful depends on (1) whether it is created in good faith; (2) whether the disposer can by law affect with the trust the property or subject-matter to which it is annexed; and (3) whether the object or person in whose favour it is created can by law be benefited by it. If a trust fails in any one of these particulars it is illegal and void (g).

Property
capable of being affected with a trust.

44. Any property or interest in property which a person can at law or in equity transfer or assign, or dispose of inter vivos, or by a testamentary instrument, can be affected by him with a trust by an instrument inter vivos or by a testamentary instrument (h).

Elton* (No. 2) (1860), 27 Beav. 634; Re Parrott, Walter v. Parrott (1886), 33 Ch. D. 274, C. A. (restraint on anticipation). Powers of sale and exchange are inserted where no contrary intention is indicated (Elton v. Elton (No. 2), supra; Wise v. Piper (1880), 13 Ch. D. 848); and for the purposes of sale the trustees are held to be trustees under the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), and the amending Acts (Re Garnett Orme and Hargreave's Contract (1883), 25 Ch. D. 595).

(g) Trusts are valid or void on the same principles as legal estates (Burgess v. Wheate, A.-G. v. Wheate (1759), 1 Eden, 177, per CLARKE, M.R., at p. 195; and see pp. 25 et seq., 57, 58, post). But as to objects in whose favour a legal disposition cannot be made but a valid trust can be created, see p. 25, post. The assurance of the property to a trustee who cannot legally hold it does not invalidate the trust (Sonley v. Clockmakers' Co. (Master etc.) (1780), 1 Bro. C. C. 80).

(h) Trusts and legal estates are governed by the same rules (Bac. Abr. 251, tit. Uses and Trusts (A); Burgess v. Wheate, A.-G. v. Wheate, supra). As to the inalienability of real property granted by the Crown or Parliament as a reward for distinguished public services, see title GIFTS, Vol. XV., p. 408. Chattels, or an interest in chattels, can in some cases be disposed of in equity when not assignable at law (Joseph v. Lyons (1884), 15 Q. B. D. 280, C. A., per BRETT, M.R., at p. 284; Hallas v. Robinson (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 288, C. A., per BAGGALLAY, L.J., at p. 292 (future goods)); see title PERSONAL PROPERTY, Vol. XXII., p. 410. A life interest with remainders cannot be created in live stock or consumable articles (Randall v. Russell (1817), 3 Mer. 190; Andrew v. Andrew (1845), 1 Coll. 686, 690; Twining v. Powell (1845), 2 Coll. 262, 268; Phillips v. Beal (No. 1) (1862), 32 Beav. 25; Cockayne v. Harrison (1872), L. R. 13 Eq. 432, per Lord ROMILLY, M.R., at p. 434), except where they form part of the stock in trade of a business (Groves v. Wright (1856), 2 K. & J. 347; Phillips v. Beal (No. 1), supra; Cockayne v. Harrison, supra; Myers v. Washbrook, [1901] 1 K. B. 360). As to trusts of heirlooms and other chattels settled with realty, see title SETTLEMENTS, Vol. XXV., pp. 703 et seq.

45. A trust can be created in favour of any person or object to which a gift can in law be given direct (i). A trust can also be created in favour of a lawful object to which a gift cannot be directly given by reason of there being no hand to receive it (k). Thus, a trust for the benefit of animals serviceable to man is legal (l), though a trust for wild animals is not (m). Similarly, a trust to erect a monument, and keep it in repair for a period not exceeding some specified life or lives and twenty-one years afterwards, is a legal trust (n).

SECT. 2.

Express Trusts.Lawful objects of a trust.

46. Trusts of the nature of executory devises and corresponding trusts of personal property, including chattels real, are valid within the same limits of perpetuity as the law prescribes with respect to executory devises (o). Equitable remainders and reversions and future interests can be barred and destroyed in the same manner and by the same process as legal estates of the same description (p).

Trusts
analogous to executory
devises.

47. Where the creation of a trust is made for a fraudulent purpose or otherwise than in good faith, or is procured by misrepresentation, fraud, or other undue means, the trust is voidable in the same manner as a direct assurance which is executed in similar circumstances (q).

Fraudulent
trusts.

SECT. 2.

Express Trusts.

Charitable and public trusts.

Useless trusts.

Immoral and illegal trusts.

Discretionary trusts.

48. Trusts for charities and for public purposes are subject to restrictions, the non-observance of which, in any case, renders the trust void or voidable (r).

49. A trust for a useless purpose is void (s).

50. A trust is illegal and cannot be enforced in equity if it is created for an object or purpose in favour of which a direct gift or a contract cannot be enforced in law on the ground of being immoral or otherwise contrary to public policy or illegal (t).

51. A discretionary trust for a variety of objects or purposes, some legal and some illegal, in the disjunctive or alternative according as the trustees may select, is valid so far as respects the legal objects or purposes, and the trustees may exercise their discretionary selection in respect of the objects or purposes which are legal, but they cannot validly do so in respect of those which are illegal (u). The alternative discretion in favour of the legal objects must, however, be clearly conferred (w). If the trust is expressly for certain objects and purposes, some legal and some illegal, the question whether the trust is wholly valid or wholly void, or is partly valid and partly void, depends upon the particular form of the trust (x). If the portion of the property which would have had to be applied to the illegal purpose, supposing it to have been legal, has been prescribed or can be ascertained, the trust, so far as relates to the legal purpose, will be upheld (y). Where, therefore, it is in the form of a trust for a legal purpose of so much of the property as is not applied for the illegal purpose, and the legal purpose is charitable, it will attach to the whole of the property in favour of the legal charitable purpose (a). The same principle applies if the trust is for a legal purpose, with an illegal purpose as regards a portion of the property attached thereto (b). On the other hand, if the portion applicable to the illegal purpose has not been prescribed and cannot be ascertained, so that it is uncertain whether, if the illegal purpose could have been carried out, there would have remained any residue at all for the legal purpose, the whole trust is void (c).

SECT. 2.
Express
Trusts.

52. The objects of a trust, whether single or distributive or alternative, must be indicated with sufficient precision either specifically or generally (d). If they are left entirely to the discretion of the trustees, the trust is void for vagueness and uncertainty (e).

Trusts void for uncertainty.

53. The rules of law which render a disposition of property void for remoteness (f) apply to equitable remainders where the legal estate is vested in trustees (g).

petuity.

But a trust for such charitable purposes as the trustee may think proper is good (Chapman v. Brown, supra, per GRANT, M.R., at p. 410; Moggridge v. Thackwell (1803), 7 Ves. 36). A trust in favour of a Roman Catholic archbishop with a desire that he should apply the property for parochial purposes in his diocese at his discretion is good; and a gift to a provincial of a monastic order for the purposes of a third order, the members of which are not bound by vows, is good, not being for a purpose illegal under the Roman Catholic Relief Act, 1829 (10 Geo. 4, c. 7) (Re Van Wart, Ramsay v. Bourne (1911), Times, 17th February); but a trust that the archbishop should apply the property as he might judge most conducive to the good of religion is void for uncertainty (*Dunne v. trusts (i), or (2) for public objects which are not of a charitable character (k), in which case, with certain exceptions, they must not infringe the law which restricts the creation of perpetuities (l).

Private trusts.

55. Trusts for private purposes may be created in any circumstances (m), but they most frequently occur in settlements and wills (n).

(ii.) Limited Trusts for Individuals.

Trusts for benefit of persons
sui juris.

56. A trust of capital or income for the benefit in some special manner of a person who is sui juris (o) confers on him an absolute beneficial interest in the capital or income, as the case may be (p). If the trust in his favour is not limited to his life or some shorter period, it gives him (q), or, if he becomes bankrupt, his trustee in bankruptcy (r), the right to call for a transfer of the trust property.

Special or discretionary trusts of income.

57. A trust to apply the income of property for the benefit of a person or object in a special manner or in such manner as the trustees think fit is an absolute trust for that person or object (s).

A trust to apply the whole or part of the income for a special purpose for the benefit of a person is, however, a trust for him of only so much as is necessary for that purpose (t); and if the trustees in such a case are given a discretion as to the amount to be applied, they are at liberty to exercise that discretion by limiting the amount (a).

Express
Trusts.

58. Where a trust confers in other respects an absolute estate or interest in property on a cestui que trust of full age and sound mind, whether for life or altogether, a provision in restraint of the anticipation or alienation of either the capital or the income of the property, whether by bankruptcy or otherwise, or a provision that it shall not be liable to the claims of creditors, is void (b), except where it attaches to the estate or interest of a married woman during coverture (c), since it would deprive the interest given of one of its legal incidents (d). It makes no difference that a discretion is given to the trustee as to the mode of applying the capital or income for the benefit of the cestui que trust (e).

(iii.) Trusts for Life and in Remainder.

Rights where real estate is to be sold or purchased.

59. Where a will directs that real property shall be sold, a beneficiary for life (i) is entitled to the rents and profits until the sale, provided that it be not unduly postponed (k), and where money is to be invested in real estate he is entitled to the income until the investment (l).

Income of property to

Where a testator directs his estate to be invested in securities, it depends upon the language of the will whether the income thereof until investment is to be treated as capital or is to be paid to a beneficiary for life, or whether the beneficiary for life is entitled only to such income as the estate would have produced if properly invested at the testator's death (m).

interests of successive beneficiaries in the capital and income of the trust property (o). In the case of trusts of such property created by wills in favour of persons in succession, it is assumed in the absence of direction to the contrary that the testator intended that all the beneficiaries should enjoy the whole property in succession (p). The trustees, therefore, must, for the sake of a beneficiary for life, realise any portions of the trust property which consist of reversions or future estates (q), and, for the sake of beneficiaries in remainder, must also realise any portions of it which are of a wasting character or of a character not authorised to be retained as investments (r), and in each case they must lay out the money so produced in permanent investments (s). Similarly, where a testator bequeaths annuities for life payable out of wasting property, it must be sold, and out of the proceeds of sale a permanent fund must be created for payment of the annuities (t). The creator of the trust may, however, clearly indicate an intention that the wasting property shall be enjoyed by the beneficiary for life in specie (a), as, for instance, by its being specifically designated (b), or by a discretionary power of sale being given to the trustee (c), or by a direction to sell or divide the property after the death of the beneficiary for life (d). In the absence of such clear indication an intention that wasting property shall be converted is presumed (e). But the presumption is much weaker, if it exists at all, in the case of an absolute gift with an executory limitation over (f). The rule as to conversion does not apply in the case of a settlement by deed (g), nor to leasehold property situate abroad where a contrary rule of law prevails (h).

promptly realised and which are not immediately realised (m). If the property which either (1) is producing no income, or (2) is producing an abnormally large income, is not capable of immediate realisation or conversion without loss and damage to the trust estate, equity requires that a value shall be set upon it (n), and that the tenant for life shall be given or allowed interest at a reasonable rate on such value (o), and that the residue either (1) of the capital sum ultimately produced by the property (p), or (2) of the income

(n) Turner v. Newport (1846), 2 Ph. 14; Re Chesterfield's (Earl) Trusts (1883), 24 Ch. D. 643. Where a reversionary interest forming part of a residuary estate bequeathed in trust for a beneficiary for life and remaindermen falls into possession at a date subsequent to the testator's death, the sum must be ascertained which, put out at interest at the testator's death and accumulated at compound interest with yearly rests, would produce the amount which has been actually realised; and the sum so ascertained is attributable to capital, and the remainder of the amount to income (Re Chesterfield's (Earl) Trusts, supra; Re Hobson, Walter v. Solicitor for the Treasury, [1900] 2 Ch. 107, C. A.). Where sums originally belonging to a testator's residuary estate bequeathed in trust for a beneficiary for life and remaindermen, and not recovered until some time after the expiration of twelve months from the testator's death, were paid away by mistake, and were afterwards restored to the estate, they were held to be divisible between the beneficiary for life and the remaindermen on the principle of ascertaining what was the value of the sums at the end of a year from the testator's death and allowing out of them to the beneficiary for life interest on the amount of that value (Re Cleveland's (Duke) Estate, Hay v. Wolmer, [1895] 2 Ch. 542; and see Delves v. Newington (1885), 52 L. T. 512).

(o) The rate of interest allowed has usually been 4 per cent. (Turner v. Newport (1846), 2 Ph. 14, 18; Meyer v. Simonsen (1852), 5 De G. & Sm. 723, 727; Brown v. Gellatly (1867), 2 Ch. The principle is the same whether the property is realty or personalty (s). If she is not restrained from anticipation, she can dispose of the property to the same extent and in the same manner as if she were not under coverture (a). A conveyance upon trust to make good breaches of trust committed by the disposer in respect of certain trust estates was held to be irrevocable, being a trust for particular persons, not for general creditors (*New, Prance and Garrard's Trustee v. A trust is, however, construed so as to carry out the expressed or implied intention of the disposer (s), and therefore, under a trust of real property, a limitation of an equitable estate in fee or otherwise may be created by words which in law would be insufficient to create the intended estate (t).

In particular, the common law doctrine as to contingent remainders founded on feudal rules that if at the determination of a prior freehold estate there is no person who answers the description of a remainderman next entitled to take the contingent remainder fails (a), was never held to apply to equitable or trust estates; and it has always been held that, if at the determination of a prior equitable or trust estate of freehold there is no person capable of taking, a person afterwards coming into existence within the limits

The refusal by a beneficiary for life to receive the income of the trust property during a certain period does not preclude him from retracting his refusal and claiming to receive it afterwards (*Re Young, Fraser v. trustee (i). An equitable purchaser for value, however, who acquired his title without notice of a prior equitable title, may obtain priority by getting in the legal estate, even though when he gets it in he has notice of the prior equitable title (j), unless he gets in the legal estate from a trustee who commits a breach of trust in conveying it to him (k). Such a purchaser has similar precedence if, without having actually acquired the legal estate, he has the better title or right to call for it (l).

In the case of personal
property.

79. On the other hand, in the case of personal property, a disposition of an equitable estate or interest of which notice is not given to the trustee is postponed to a subsequent disposition thereof for valuable consideration, whether by way of assignment or charge, of which prior notice is given to the trustee (m), unless the person entitled under the later disposition had when he acquired his title notice of the prior disposition (n). In case of the bankruptcy of the disposing beneficiary, the relative priority of the title of his trustee in bankruptcy and of a person claiming under a disposition from him for valuable consideration depends in like manner on whether notice to the trustee is first given of the bankruptcy or of the disposition (o). Moreover, the person claiming under a disposition of an equitable estate or interest in personal property has no remedy against a trustee who defeats the disposition by some dealing with the property before he has received notice of the disposition (p).

SECT. 2.
Express
Trusts.

80. Notice to one of several trustees is sufficient during his continuance as a trustee (q). Where, however, notice is not given to all, notice to any trustee is only effectual so long as he remains trustee, so that, when there is no longer a trustee to whom notice has been given, it becomes necessary, in order to secure protection or priority, to renew the notice to one or more of the succeeding trustees (r). If, however, notice is given to all the trustees for the time being, the priority acquired thereby is not lost by any subsequent changes in the trusteeship, so that it is not in that case necessary to renew the notice to succeeding trustees (s). The notice may be by parol (t), but for the sake of safety it should be in writing (a). It must be clear and distinct (b), and, if it states particulars, must do so correctly, so far

C. 369, per Lord HERSCHELL, L.C., at pp. 379 et seq.; see title CHOSSES IN ACTION, Vol. IV., pp. 383, 384. If the disposition is made to a trustee, his notice of it is sufficient; but if one of the trustees, being also a beneficiary, is himself the disposer, his notice of the disposition will not suffice without notice also to one or more of his co-trustees, since it is to his interest to conceal the fact of the disposition (Browne v. Savage, supra; Willes v. Greenhill (No. 1) (1860), 29 Beav. 376; Lloyd's Bank v. Pearson, [1901] 1 Ch. 865; Re Dallas, [1904] 2 Ch. 385, C. A., per BUCKLEY, J., at p. 400, and per VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., at pp. 411, 412). A person taking a disposition of an equitable interest in trust property should therefore inquire of all the trustees whether they have notice of a prior disposition of the interest (Smith v. Smith, supra, per Lord LYNCHURST, C.B., at pp. 233, 234; Re Wyatt, White v. Ellis, supra, per STIRLING, J., at p. 197).

Notice given before the property is actually vested in the trustee is ineffectual (Johnstone v. Cox (1881), 19 Ch. D. 17, C. A.; Re Dallas, supra).

This principle does not, however, apply where there is only one trustee for the time being and he is himself the disposer; see note (q), supra. New trustees are not under any obligation to inquire of old trustees whether they have received notice of any dispositions of equitable interests in the trust property (Phipps v. Lovegrove, Prosser v. Phipps, supra, per JAMES, L.J., at pp. 90, 91).

as respects all material points (c). It must be given to the trustee himself (d), but it is immaterial by whom it is given or in what way the trustee receives it (e).

Fund in court.

81. Where there is for the time being no trustee of the property, it is sufficient if the best precautions of which the circumstances admit are taken to render the fact of the disposition known to all whom it may concern (f).

82. In the case of a fund in court, the obtaining of a stop order thereon takes the place of giving notice to the trustee as respects the conferring of priority (g).

SECT. 2.

Express Trusts.

Valuable consideration in favour of third party.

Binding whether voluntary or for consideration.

Avoidance in certain circumstances.

Change of circumstances.

Rectification on account of error.

85. Where an incomplete trust is declared between a disposing party and another for valuable consideration in favour of a third person, performance of the trust can be enforced at the suit of the other party to the declaration, but not at the suit of the third person (e).

SUB-SECT. 10.—Revocation, Avoidance, and Rectification of Trusts.

86. Where a trust for a lawful object is duly executed, or, in other words, an express trust is completely constituted (f), it is generally binding and irrevocable whether it was constituted or declared for valuable consideration or voluntarily, unless a power of revocation is expressly reserved (g).

A disposition of property in trust stands, however, on the same footing as a direct transfer or gift of property in respect of its liability in certain circumstances to be set aside, if voluntary, on the bankruptcy of the disposer (h), or, whether voluntary or not, as a fraud upon his creditors or other persons having a prior equitable claim upon the property (i).

87. A trust created to provide for particular circumstances may become void if the circumstances cease to exist (h).

88. Where by mistake an instrument creating a trust of property does not express the intention of the disposer, it will be cancelled or rectified according as the true intention of the disposer requires (l).

SECT. 2.

Express
Trusts.SECT. 3.—*Constructive and Implied Trusts.*Revocation of trust.SUB-SECT. 1.—Constructive Trusts.

Definition.

90. A constructive trust, in its strict sense (a), is a trust attached by law to property which is not expressly subject to a trust, but which a person holding other property in trust for some other person or object, or occupying in respect of other property a fiduciary position towards some other person or object, has acquired by means of his ownership of or dealings with such trust or fiduciary property (b). The person who holds property on a constructive trust occupies a fiduciary position in respect of it, and is sometimes called a constructive trustee or a trustee de son tort (c).

91. Where a lease is renewable by custom or contract (d), and a person holding it in whole or in part as a trustee or agent, or in a fiduciary capacity for another person or object, obtains a renewal of the lease, he holds the renewed lease in whole or in part in trust leaseholds.

MISTAKE, Vol. XXI., pp. 12, 19, 23, 28. The instrument may be reformed after the death of the disposer, if it is proved beyond all doubt that it did not express his intentions (Lister v. Hodgson (1867), L. R. 4 Eq. 30, per Lord ROMILLY, M.R., at p. 32; Weir v. Van Tromp (1900), 16 T. L. R. 531).

(m) Lane v. Debenham (1853), 11 Hare, 188, per WOOD, V.-C., at p. 192. As to revocation of trusts for creditors, see pp. 38, 39, post. The revocation of a trust or use by a writing not being a will is chargeable with a stamp duty of 10s. (Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 1, Sched. I., Revocation); and see title REVENUE, Vol. XXIV., pp. 724 et seq.

(a) The term "constructive trust" is commonly used as synonymous with the term "implied trust" (as to which see pp. 58 et seq., post), and also includes resulting trusts (as to which see pp. 49 et seq., post). For the purposes of this section of this title the term is used as defined in the text.

(b) Espinasse v. Lowe (1764), 7 Bro. Parl. Cas. 345, 355; see p. 7, ante. As to constructive and resulting trusts, see, further, title EQUITY, Vol. XIII., pp. 155 et seq.

(c) The expression "constructive trustee" or "trustee de son tort" is more strictly applicable to a person who holds property which is subject to an express trust without having duly become trustee thereof or acquired a fiduciary position in respect thereof (Barnes v. Addy (1874), 9 Ch. App. 244, per Lord SELBORNE, L.C., at p. 251; Soar v. Ashwell, [1893] 2 Q. B. 390, C. A., per KAY, L.J., at p. 405; and see pp. 6, ante, 87 et seq., post).

(d) The principle does not apply when a person without fraud takes a new lease or acquires the reversion on a lease which he holds on trust or in a fiduciary capacity, where such lease is not renewable by contract or custom (Randall v. Russell (1817), 3 Mer. 190; Longton v. Wilsby (1897), 76 L. T. 770; Bevan v. Webb, [1905] 1 Ch. 620). Where a person partly interested in an old lease takes a new lease to himself on the surrender or at the expiration of the lease, he is not a constructive trustee of the new lease unless, in respect of the old lease, he occupied some special position by virtue of which he owed a duty towards the other persons interested, as, for instance, as tenant for life in respect of settled leaseholds, or as partner in respect of a partnership lease, or as mortgagee in respect of a mortgaged lease (Re Biss, Biss v. Biss, [1903] 2 Ch. 40, C. A., distinguishing Ex parte Grace (1799), 1 Bos. & P. 376, and considering Palmer v. Young (1684), 1 Vern. 276, more correctly reported, [1903] 2 Ch. 65, n., and Rawe v. Chichester (1773), Amb. 715, 719); see also Featherstonhaugh v. Fenwick (1810), 17 Ves. 298; Hunter v. Allen, [1907] 1 I. R. 212; and note (e), p. 48, post.

for that person or object (e). If instead of renewing the lease he purchases the reversion from the person from whom renewal could have been claimed, he holds the reversion on the same trust as the lease (f).

92. Where an accretion of any kind comes to property held in trust or in a fiduciary capacity, the accretion cannot be retained by the holder of the property, but forms part of the capital of the trust property for the benefit of the person or object beneficially interested in it (g).

93. A person holding a fiduciary position in relation to property cannot deal with the property for his own benefit (h). Nor can he in dealing with a third person with respect to the property obtain

The fact that the lessor expressly refused to renew for the benefit of the cestui que trust makes no difference (Keech v. Sandford, supra; Fitzgibbon v. Scanlan, supra, per Lord ELDON, L.C., at p. 269), and it is immaterial that the new lease contains additional property and is at an increased rent (Re Morgan, Pillgrem v. Pillgrem, supra; but see Acheson v. Fair (1843), 2 Con. & Law. 208). If the creator of the trust himself takes a renewed lease, he holds it for the trust (Re Lulham, Brinton v. Lulham, supra). As to the renewal of a lease of partnership premises, see note (d), p. 47, ante; title PARTNERSHIP, Vol. XXII., pp. 48, 82; as to renewal by a tenant for life, see pp. 61, 62, post; as to renewal by a mortgagee, see title MORTGAGE, Vol. XXI., p. 127.

But it is otherwise where he purchases the reversion from a person to whom the lessor has lawfully assigned it discharged from the legal liability to renew the lease (Randall v. Russell, supra; Bevan v. Webb, [1905] 1 Ch. 620). Where this is not the case he may have a lien on the trust estate for the purchase-money which he has paid (Isaac v. Wall, supra). On the same principle it was held that where two sisters entitled to a mortgage as tenants in common in equal shares purchased from the mortgagor the equity of redemption, and, though each paid half the purchase-money, took the conveyance of it to themselves as joint tenants, they were in equity entitled to the property in equal shares as tenants in common (Edwards v. Fashion (1712), Prec. Ch. 332).

The confirmation by Act of Parliament of the title of a tenant for life of an encroachment was held to enure also for the benefit of the remaindermen (Yem v. Edwards (1857), 1 De G. & J. 598, C. A.). Where, however, a person is a trustee of property only in respect of a specific sum charged thereon or payable thereout, and is absolute owner of the rest, he is beneficially entitled to the whole of any increment thereof or accretion thereto (Re Campbell, Campbell v. Campbell, [1893] 3 Ch. 468).

a personal advantage to himself by a secret agreement with that person (i). Similarly, where profits are made by a person by means of dealings with trust property or property in respect of which he stands in a fiduciary position, or by means of his occupying a fiduciary position, they form part of the capital or income of the property, as the case may be, and are held in trust for the person or object beneficially interested in such capital or income (k).

SECT. 3.
Constructive and Implied Trusts.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Resulting Trusts.

(i.) In General.

94. A resulting trust is a constructive or implied trust arising by operation of law (l) in the following cases, namely:—(1) where an intention to put property into trust is sufficiently expressed or indicated, but the actual trust either is not declared in whole or in part or fails in whole or in part (m); (2) where property is purchased in the name or placed in the possession of a person ostensibly for his own use, but really in order to effect a particular purpose which fails (n); and (3) where property is purchased in the name or placed in the possession of a person without any intimation that he is to hold it in trust, but the retention of the beneficial interest by the purchaser or disposer is presumed to

Thompson*, [1896] 1 Ch. 71. But where the profit obtained, though it ultimately comes out of the trust estate, is in reality remuneration for services rendered under a proper and independent agreement, it does not form part of the trust property (Re Lewis, Lewis v. Lewis, [1910] W. N. 217). A partner who, in the course of negotiating for a lease to the partnership firm, receives a large sum of money from the lessors, is a trustee of it for the benefit of the firm (Fawcett v. Whitehouse, supra). As to the relation of promoters and directors of a company to the company, see pp. 59, 60, post; title COMPANIES, Vol. V., pp. 221, 222, 226. A director who purchases property independently of the company and afterwards sells it to the company at a profit is not a trustee for the company of the profit (Burland v. Earle, [1902] A. C. 83, P. C.). As to the liability to account for secret profits where a trustee becomes bankrupt, see title BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY, Vol. II., p. 260.

have been intended and is held to be equitable (o). In all these cases, except where the failure of a declared trust arises from the illegality of the object, and the trustee relies on the maxim in pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis (p), the beneficial interest in the property, so far as not applicable to any sufficiently expressed or indicated beneficiary or object, results or reverts to the disposer or purchaser of the property or, in the case of his previous death, to his representatives (q).

(ii.) Trust not Exhaustive.

Beneficial destination of the property not exhausted.

95. Where property is assured to a trustee upon trusts, and the trusts do not, either as declared by the instrument of assurance or in the event, legally exhaust the beneficial destination of the property, the remaining beneficial interest therein results to the settlor and forms part of his real or personal estate according to the nature of the property (r). This principle, however, does not apply (1) where a contrary intention is indicated in the instrument of assurance or is otherwise sufficiently proved (s); or (2) where the trust for which the property has been assured fails owing to its being for a purpose which is illegal in itself; and which has been partly carried out, in which case the court gives no assistance to the disposer in asserting his right under a resulting trust, on the principle that in pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis (t). If, however,

Where, on a marriage, personal property of the wife is settled so as to give a life interest therein to the husband after her death so long as he remains a widower, he ceases on his remarriage to be entitled to the life interest and there is a resulting trust thereof for the wife's estate (Re Wyatt, Gowan v. Wyatt (1889), 60 L. T. 920). Where property is settled in contemplation of a marriage which is never in fact solemnised, there is a resulting trust of it in favour of the party who settled it (Thomas v. Brennan (1846), 15 L. J. (CH.) 420; Mitford v. Reynolds (1848), 16 Sim. 130; Essery v. Cowlard (1884), 26 Ch. D. 191); but where a father settles money and covenants to settle further property on his daughter on her marriage, and the trusts declared do not extend to the event (which happens) of her having no issue and surviving her husband, there is a resulting trust in favour of the daughter and not of the settlor (Doyle v. Crean, [1905] 1 I. R. 252; see Ward v. Dyas (1835), L. & G. temp. Sugd. 177).

(s) Cook v. Hutchinson, supra; Biddulph v. Williams (1875), 1 Ch. D. 203. The presumption of a resulting trust may be rebutted even by parol evidence (Cook v. Hutchinson, supra, per Lord LANGDALE, M.R., at p. 50).

This principle, however, does not apply to a trust for an object which, though not unlawful in itself, is incapable by law of taking under the trust (Russell v. Jackson (1852), 10 Hare, 204, 214).

nothing has been done to carry the illegal purpose into effect, the disposer is entitled to have the property reconveyed (u).

96. Where a testator by his will devises real property in trust and does not exhaustively indicate, in a manner which can legally take effect (x), the persons or objects to be benefited by it, or where there is a failure of the persons or objects indicated, there is a resulting trust of the remaining beneficial interest in the real property for the testator's heir-at-law (a), if there is no indication of a contrary intention on the part of the testator (b). The principle applies where the destination of the rents and profits of real property during a limited period either has not been indicated by the testator or fails to take effect (c).

If a testator devises real property upon trust for sale and does not exhaustively indicate the application of the proceeds of sale, the beneficial interest in these proceeds and in the funds which represent them, so far as the destination thereof is not indicated, results to the heir-at-law (d), even though the testator expressly directs that no part of the proceeds shall lapse to or result for the benefit of the heir-at-law (e), or directs that the proceeds shall form part of his personal estate (f). deemed in equity to be held on a resulting trust for the purchaser or transferor (h).

104. The principle of implying a resulting trust applies where several persons purchase property in the name of one (i). Where, however, two or more persons purchase property in their joint names or transfer property into their joint names, and contribute the purchase-money or property in equal shares, they hold the property as joint tenants with benefit of survivorship both at law and in equity, unless there is evidence of a contrary intention on their part at the time of the purchase or transfer, or unless there are circumstances from which such an intention can be inferred (k). If they contributed the purchase-money or property in unequal shares, there is a tenancy in common between them in equity (l), though even in this case the equitable tenancy in common may be rebutted by evidence or circumstances (m).

105. Where a father or other person in loco parentis purchases property in the name of a child or transfers property into the name of a child, the transaction does not create a resulting trust for the purchaser or transferor, but is an advancement or gift to the child (n), unless there is evidence of a contrary intention at the time of the transaction (o), or the circumstances are such as to raise a presumption against the advancement or gift (p). The rule is the same where the purchase or transfer is made in the joint names of a child or a stranger (a), or in the name of an illegitimate child towards whom the father has placed himself in loco parentis (b). On the other hand, where a wife hands over to her husband property belonging to her for her separate use, without any intention of making a gift of it to him, he is a trustee of it for her (g). does not assist the purchaser or transferor to enforce his claim to the beneficial interest in it under a resulting trust or interfere with the possession of the nominee or transferee (m).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Trusts Implied from Other Relationships.

Contractual or other relationship.

110. Where under a contractual or other relationship subsisting between parties one of them holds or deals with the property of the other in a fiduciary capacity, he is regarded in equity as doing so on an implied trust from the other party, but subject in each case to the conditions which the relationship implies or involves (n).

Agent.

111. A contract of agency does not in itself make the agent a trustee (o); but he may, under a power of attorney or otherwise, hold and deal with the property of his principal in such circumstances and in such a manner as to constitute him a trustee for his principal (p).

If the trustee seeks the direction of a court of equity as to the application of the property, the court directs that it shall revert to the estate of the disposer (Phillips v. Probyn, [1899] 1 Ch. 811). The last principle does not apply where the object of a trust is lawful in itself but is incapable in law of taking under the disposition (Russell v. Jackson (1852), 10 Hare, 204, 214); see pp. 50 et seq., ante.

Wherever persons agree concerning a particular subject, that, in a court of equity, as against the party himself and any claiming under him, voluntarily or with notice, raises a trust (Legard v. Hodges (1792), 1 Ves. 477, per Lord THURLOW, L.C., at p. 478; Berwick v. Matthews (1892), 66 L. T. 564). Trustees and persons acting in a fiduciary position, when ordered by a court of equity to pay money in their possession or under their control, are liable to imprisonment for default in payment (Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62), s. 4 (3); *Marris v. 112. An auctioneer holds on trust for the vendor deposit money paid to him in respect of a sale (q).

113. The deposit of money with a banker is ordinarily not a transaction which creates a fiduciary relation between the parties, but is simply a loan (r). Special circumstances may, however, create an implied trust in the case of a banker or other person with whom the money or property of another is deposited (s).

114. A broker or consignee, though not ordinarily in the position of a trustee (t), may receive property under conditions which create an implied trust of it for the owner (a).

115. A company or corporation is in a certain sense a trustee of its corporate property for its nominal members (b). It is not, however, ordinarily affected with trusts or equitable interests upon or subject to which its nominal members hold their shares or interests therein (c); and an insurance company is not a trustee of money due under its policies (d).

On the other hand, an implied trust for the company and its members, involving inability to make personal profit out of transactions affecting the company (e), is attached by law to the position of a promoter of a company (f) or a director of a Lowten* (1813), 1 Ves. & B. 226, per Lord ELDON, L.C., at pp. 244 et seq.); and the ordinary rights and duties as between a trustee and his cestuis que trust do not subsist between a company or corporation and its members (Salomon v. Salomon & Co., Salomon & Co. v. Salomon, [1897] A. C. 22, per Lord HERSCHELL, at pp. 43, 44). The money of a company or corporation is a trust fund because it is applicable only to its special purposes; but the company or corporation is the cestui que trust, and its individual members do not hold that position (Russell v. Wakefield Waterworks Co. (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 474, per JESSEL, M.R., at p. 479). A company is not trustee of dividends declared; see title COMPANIES, Vol. V., p. 276.

Again, if a breach of trust is committed by a company acting through its board of directors, no action in respect thereof can be maintained against the directors personally (i).

Executor.

116. In a loose sense a legal personal representative is a trustee for the creditors and beneficiaries claiming under the deceased, since he holds the real and personal estate of the deceased for their benefit and not for his own (k); and he is guilty of a breach of trust if he misapplies it (l). An executor is not, however, as such, strictly a trustee for a legatee, whether the legatee is an adult (m) or an infant (n), nor for the next of kin of the testator (o), notwithstanding the terms of the Executors Act, 1830 (p). He does not become a trustee by signing a residuary account (q), or by merely assenting to an absolute legacy (a). If, however, property is bequeathed to him on trust, he becomes a trustee of it (b) when he has either proved the will (c) and has paid all the debts (d), or, in the case of a legacy, has assented to it (e) or has severed it from the rest of the estate (f), or has executed a declaration of trust (g). If he receives a bonus from a railway company in consideration of not opposing their Bill in Parliament, he holds it on a similar trust (b).

A tenant for life of real estate, who pays off a charge thereon without taking an assignment of it to himself, is presumed to have intended to constitute himself a creditor against the estate for the sum so paid. On the other hand, if a tenant in tail or absolute owner pays off a charge on the estate, he is presumed to have intended to exonerate the estate therefrom and is not deemed a creditor in respect thereof. In each case the presumption may be rebutted (c).

mortgagee calls it into operation (l). Under the ordinary form of mortgage a mortgagee is in some senses and in some circumstances a trustee for the mortgagor and for subsequent incumbrancers (m). A mortgagee who has entered into possession of the mortgaged property is trustee of the rents and profits thereof for himself and subsequent incumbrancers and for the mortgagor (n). If he has not interfered with the property, he is not strictly a trustee till the mortgage money is tendered to him (o). A mortgagee who sells the property is, however, constructive trustee of the surplus proceeds of sale, if any, after payment of the money owing to him on his security (p); and a mortgagee of the legal estate, who has been paid off, holds that legal estate, until he reconveys it, in trust for the mortgagor (q).

Part II.—Trustees.

SECT. 1.—Qualification.

SECT. 1.

Qualification.

Who may be trustees.

124. Any person who is capable in law of holding property in his own right may hold the office of trustee in respect of such property (f). A corporation, whether aggregate or sole, may be a trustee (g), but cannot without a licence in mortmain hold real property in trust which it could not without such licence hold for its own benefit (h). The office may be held by a woman, whether unmarried (i) or married (k), or by an infant (l), or an alien (m).

125. A person may hold a legal estate in property as trustee of that estate for himself and other beneficiaries (n). He may not, however, at the same time be sole trustee and sole cestui que trust of commensurate legal and equitable estates in property (o), though

SECT. 2.—Commencement of Office.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Modes of Commencement.

Trustees, how constituted.

126. A person is legally constituted a trustee who (1) is originally designated as such by the instrument creating the trust (q), or is duly appointed as such under a power for the purpose contained in that instrument (r), or under a statutory power for the purpose (s), or by a court of competent jurisdiction (t), or, in the case of a charitable trust, by the Charity Commissioners or under a legally established scheme (a); and (2) accepts the trust either expressly or by acting in the execution of it (b). A person who is not legally constituted trustee becomes in equity a constructive trustee (c) (1) where trust property becomes in law, for want of a legally constituted trustee, vested in him (d); or (2) where he has acquired trust property in circumstances which, in equity, are deemed to require him to hold it upon the trust to which it was subject when he acquired it (e); or (3) where he intermeddles with and acts as trustee in relation to trust property, in which case he is also called a trustee de son tort (f).

Appointment
by creator
of trust.

127. An original trustee is generally appointed by the creator of the trust either expressly (g) or by language which implies that he is to fill that character (h).

Equitable estates in common will merge in a joint legal estate acquired by the tenants in common (Re Selous, Thomson v. Selous, [1901] 1 Ch. 921). 128. Trusts do not fail by a failure of trustees (i). Where no trustee is effectually appointed by the creator of the trust (k), or all the trustees appointed by him die or refuse to accept the trust (l) before the trust takes effect, the person in whom the trust property is vested by reason of such failure of appointment, death, or refusal is deemed in equity to be the trustee of the property for the purposes of the trust (m). In such event, however, if there is any procedure for the appointment of new trustees which is applicable to the case, it can be resorted to for the appointment of an original trustee (n), and if such procedure is not applicable or is not resorted to, a court of equity will supply an original trustee (o).

(a) In General.

133. An appointment of a new trustee under a power for that purpose contained in the trust disposition must be in accordance in all material respects with the terms of the power (f). It should in strictness be made by direct operative words (g); but it may be effected by a recital or statement in a deed to which the appointor is a party, to the effect that he has appointed a certain person as a new trustee (h) or that such person is the present trustee (i). Where several persons have a power of appointing a new trustee they may, in the absence of any direction to the contrary, exercise the power by separate instruments (k).

without having ever acted therein (b), unless a contrary intention is indicated by the language of the instrument which contains the power (c).

A power to appoint a trustee in the place of one who desires to be discharged from or declines or refuses to act in the trust authorises an appointment in the place of one who has never acted in and who disclaims the trust (d), or of one who under the Trustee Act, 1893 (e), pays the trust fund into court (f).

138. An appointment of a new trustee in the place of one who becomes bankrupt is authorised by a power to appoint a new trustee in the place of a trustee who becomes unfit to act (g), but not by a power to appoint in the place of one who is incapable of acting (h). A power in the latter form refers exclusively to personal incapacity (i), and therefore authorises an appointment in the place of a lunatic trustee (k). Absence abroad does not constitute unfitness or incapacity on the part of a trustee (l); and a direction that a trustee shall cease to fill the post on departing from the United Kingdom from any cause and in any circumstances does not apply to a mere temporary absence (m). If, however, the power extends to appointing a new trustee in the place of one going to reside abroad or being abroad, and that event happens, the power should be exercised, and a cestui que trust may call upon the donee of the power to exercise it (n).

ment of Office.
Beneficiaries.

140. Where a power of appointing new trustees is conferred on a person by name who is beneficially interested in the trust property he can exercise it although he has incumbered or alienated his beneficial interest (q).

A power to named beneficiaries to appoint new trustees with the consent or concurrence of the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee for the time being is exercisable by them at their sole discretion when there is no trustee living or continuing to act (r).

141. Where the power to appoint is vested in the trustees who are for the time being surviving, even though it is given to the original trustees by name, it is annexed to their office (s). It can, therefore, be exercised by a single continuing trustee during the life of another of the original trustees who has disclaimed the trust (t).

Surviving
trustees.

Where an express power of appointment is vested in the surviving or continuing trustees it cannot be exercised by a trustee who declines to act (u), or who is retiring from the trust (w), but is exercisable independently of him by the other trustees who are actually continuing in the trust (a). Where, however, the power is vested in the surviving or continuing or other trustee or trustees it is exercisable by a retiring trustee (b).

Retiring
trustee.

142. Where an express power of appointment is vested in the acting trustees or trustee for the time being or the executors or administrators of the last acting trustee, the representatives of the last surviving trustee, having the trust property vested in them, and being capable in law of executing the trust, are acting trustees who can exercise the power (c). named person, his executors or administrators or assigns, it is validly exercised after his death by his acting executors without the concurrence of another who has renounced probate of his will (d).

As regards trusts which have come into operation since 1881, a power of appointment capable of being exercised by a sole or last surviving or continuing trustee may, unless the instrument creating the trust contains a direction to the contrary, be exercised by the personal representatives of such trustee (e).

Trustee

of lunatic.

144. Where the person in whom a power of appointing new trustees is vested or whose consent to such an appointment is required is a lunatic or of unsound mind, the committee or quasi-committee of his estate may, under an order of a judge in lunacy, in the name and on behalf of such person exercise a power of appointment of new trustees vested in him or give any consent required from him to the exercise of such a power (g). The person or persons who after and in consequence of such exercise of the power are the trustee or trustees have the same rights and powers as he or they would have had if the order had been made by the High Court (h). In any such case, where it seems to be for the benefit of the lunatic or person of unsound mind, the judge may make any order respecting the property subject to the trust which might have been made by the High Court on the appointment, under the Trustee Act, 1893 (i), of a new trustee or new trustees (j).

appointed by a court or otherwise, is dead (s), or remains out of the United Kingdom for more than twelve months, or desires to be discharged from all or any of the trusts or powers reposed in or conferred on him, or refuses (t), or is unfit (a), to act therein, or is incapable of acting therein (b), then the person or persons nominated for the purpose of appointing new trustees by the instrument, if any, creating the trust (c), or if there is no such person (d), or no such person able and willing to act (e), then the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee for the time being (f), or the personal representatives (g) of the last surviving or continuing trustee (h), may by writing inter vivos (i) appoint any other (k) person or persons

(s) This includes the case of a person nominated trustee in a will but dying before the testator (Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 10 (4)).

(t) See pp. 83 et seq., 111 et seq., post.

(a) See p. 70, ante.

(b) Ibid.

(c) This means the persons nominated by the instrument in terms which are applicable to the exercise of the statutory power (Cecil v. Langdon (1884), 28 Ch. D. 1, C. A.). It includes persons who are given a general power to appoint new trustees or a new trustee for the settlement (Re Walker and Hughes' Contract (1883), 24 Ch. D. 698). But persons empowered by the instrument to appoint a new trustee in, among other events, the event of a trustee becoming incapable, but not in the event of his becoming unfit to act, are not persons nominated to appoint a new trustee in the place of one who becomes unfit to act (Re Wheeler and De Rochow, [1896] 1 Ch. 315).

(d) There is no such person if he cannot be found (Cradock v. Witham, [1895] W. N. 75).

(e) This applies where the persons entitled to appoint cannot agree in appointing (Re Sheppard's Settlement Trusts, [1888] W. N. 234).

(f) A trustee can insist on exercising the power of appointment against the wishes of the majority of the cestuis que trust (Re Higginbottom, [1892] 3 Ch. 132). The power conferred on a continuing trustee extends to a refusing or retiring trustee if willing to exercise it (Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 10 (4)). His concurrence in the appointment of new trustees is not requisite in the absence of evidence that he is able and willing to concur therein (Re Coates to Parsons (1886), 34 Ch. D. 370).

(g) Personal representatives mean the acting executors or administrators (Re Parker's Trusts, [1894] 1 Ch. 707, per KEKEWICH, J., at p. 721; Conveyancing Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 37), s. 8 (4); and see p. 72, ante). They are not bound to exercise the power conferred upon them (Re Knight's (Sarah) Will (1884), 26 Ch. D. 82, C. A., per PEARSON, J., at p. 89).

(h) A person who has never acted in the trust is not reckoned as a trustee; and therefore, where all the trustees named in a will predecease the testator, the executors of the last survivor of them cannot appoint new trustees (Nicholson v. Field, [1893] 2 Ch. 511). But the executors of a sole trustee who dies after having acted can exercise the power (Re Shafto's Trusts (1885), 29 Ch. D. 247). And in cases in which stat. (1860) 23 & 24 Vict. c. 145 (commonly called Lord Cranworth's Act), s. 27, is still applicable (see note (q), p. 73, ante), and is expressly or impliedly incorporated in the trust instrument, the only proving and acting executor of a last surviving trustee can exercise the power though other executors were appointed and have not renounced (Re Boucherett, Barne v. Erskine, [1908] 1 Ch. 180).

(i) Re Parker's Trusts, supra. A sole surviving trustee cannot appoint new trustees by will; and if by his will he appoints general executors and special executors of the trust, the power of appointing new trustees is vested in the general executors (ibid.; compare Conveyancing Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 37), s. 8).

(k) A person cannot, therefore, under this power appoint himself to be a trustee (Re Newen, Newen v. Barnes, [1894] 2 Ch. 297, Re Sampson, Sampson v. Sampson, [1906] 1 Ch. 435).

to be a trustee or trustees in the place of the trustee dead (l), remaining out of the United Kingdom, desiring to be discharged, refusing, or being unfit or incapable (m).

151. Where a new trustee is appointed for the whole or any part of the trust property, the number of trustees may be increased (n). It is not obligatory to appoint more than one new trustee where only one trustee was originally appointed, or to fill up the original number of trustees where more than two trustees were originally appointed; but, except where only one trustee was originally appointed, a trustee is not discharged from his trust by the appointment of a new trustee or new trustees under the provisions of the statute, unless there will be at least two trustees to perform the trust (o).

Number of

152. Where a new trustee is appointed for the whole or any part of the trust property a separate set of trustees may be appointed for any part of the trust property held on trusts distinct from those relating to any other part or parts thereof, notwithstanding the non-appointment of any new trustees or trustee for other parts of the trust property, and any existing trustee may be appointed or remain one of the separate set of trustees, or, if only one trustee was originally appointed, one separate trustee may be so appointed for the part so held on distinct trusts (p).

Separate sets
of trustees.

153. Any assurance or thing requisite for vesting the trust property, or any part thereof, jointly in the persons who are the trustees, must be executed or done (q).

Assurances.

(m) Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 10 (1). The court does not generally appoint a new trustee where there is a person able and willing to exercise the statutory power of appointment; see note (b), p. 76, post. But where the right person to exercise it is a lunatic trustee the appointment can be made in lunacy or by the continuing trustees (Re Blake (a Person of Unsound Mind), [1887] W. N. 173, C. A.; see p. 72, ante). A new trustee cannot be appointed under the statutory power in place of an infant appointed a trustee by the instrument creating the trust (Re Tallatire, [1885] W. N. 191). A new trustee cannot be appointed under the statutory power when there is no vacancy to be filled up (Re Gregson's Trusts (1886), 34 Ch. D. 209, per NORTH, J., at p. 210). As to the power of the court to make the appointment, see ibid.; and p. 76, post.

(p) Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 10 (2) (b). Separate sets of trustees may be appointed by the court for distinct trusts notwithstanding that in a certain event the trusts may coalesce (Re Hetherington's Trusts (1886), 34 Ch. D. 211). Under the earlier enactment (Conveyancing Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 39), s. 5), which authorised the appointment of a separate set of trustees on an appointment of new trustees, there was a conflict of authority whether the appointment could be made without the authority of the court except on an appointment of new trustees for the whole of the trust property (Re Paine's Trusts (1885), 28 Ch. D. 725; Savile v. Couper (1887), 36 Ch. D. 520; Re Moss's Trusts (1888), 37 Ch. D. 513; Re Nesbitt's Trusts (1887), 19 L. R. Ir. 509, C. A.), but the doubt has been set at rest by the language of the present enactment (Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 10 (2)). As to the appointment of a separate set of trustees by the court, see p. 79, post.

154. Every new trustee appointed under the above provisions, as well before as after all the trust property has become by law or by assurance or otherwise vested in him, has the same powers, authorities, and discretions, and may in all respects act as if he had been originally appointed a trustee by the instrument, if any, creating the trust (r).

155. Appointments of new trustees of some charities and charitable and other objects may be made under the Trustee Appointment Acts, 1850—1890 (s).

(iv.) Appointment by the Court.(a) *In General.*Appointment

156. By statute (t) the High Court and, within their respective jurisdictions, a palatine court or a county court (u), may, whenever it is expedient to appoint a new trustee or new trustees (a), and it is found inexpedient, difficult, or impracticable to do so without the assistance of the court (b), make an order for the appointment of a new trustee or new trustees either in substitution for or in addition to any existing trustee (c).

(a) The court will not appoint a new trustee where it is not expedient to do so (Re Sheppard's Trusts (1862), 4 De G. F. & J. 423, C. A., per TURNER, L. J., at p. 425).

(b) Where a sole or continuing trustee is desirous of exercising his statutory power of appointment, an application to the court, though made by a majority of the beneficiaries, and though the trustee has no beneficial interest under the trust, will be refused (Re Higginbottom, [1892] 3 Ch. 132), unless it be for the appointment of the Public Trustee (Re Kensit, [1908] W. N. 235); and generally the court will not appoint a new trustee, where the appointment can be made under a power in the instrument of trust or under the statutory power (Re Soulbey's Trusts (1873), 21 W. R. 256; Re Gibbons' (John) Trusts (1882), 45 L. T. 756; Re Sutton (a Lunatic), [1885] W. N. 122, C. A.; but see Re Jackson's Trusts (1868), 16 W. R. 572; Re Shafto's Trusts (1885), 29 Ch. D. 247). As to the effect of proceedings for the administration of the trust on the exercise of a power of appointing new trustees under the instrument of trust or of the statutory power, see p. 69, ante.

(c) Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 25 (1). A new trustee may be appointed under the Act notwithstanding that the trustees have no trust property vested in them (Re Boyce (1864), 4 De G. J. & Sm. 205, per Lord WESTBURY, L. C., at pp. 208, 209). In some earlier cases it was held that the court could reappoint as new trustees persons who were already trustees (Re Stokes' Trusts (1872), L. R. 13 Eq. 333; Re Dalgleish's Settlement (1876), 4 Ch. D. 143, C. A.; Re Pearson (a Lunatic) (1877), 5 Ch. D. 982, C. A.; Re Tatham's Trusts, [1877] W. N. 259; Re Harford's Trusts (1879), 13 Ch. D. 135; Re Crowe's Trusts (No. 2) (1880), 14 Ch. D. 610), but this has been negatived in other and later cases (Re Driver's

157. The court, in appointing new trustees, does not confine itself to the original number (d), nor, on the other hand, insist on filling up the original number (e), but does not appoint a sole trustee where originally there were more than one (f). If there are two or more continuing trustees, the court in some cases authorises the continuing trustees to carry on the trust without appointing a new trustee to act with them (g).

158. The High Court may appoint a new trustee where the trust property is vested in or stands in the name of a lunatic or person of unsound mind (h). Where a testator dies a lunatic and all the trustees named in his will have predeceased him, the court may appoint new trustees of his will (i).

It appears that, as far as jurisdiction is concerned, the court may now appoint two trustees, or even a sole trustee, notwithstanding a direction in the trust instrument that the number should never be reduced below three (Re Leslie's Hassop Estates, [1911] 1 Ch. 611).

Costs.

159. An order for the appointment of a new trustee may be made on the application of any person beneficially interested under the trust, whether under disability or not, or of any person duly appointed trustee thereof (k). Where all the parties interested do not join in the application, it is usual to serve the application upon the other persons who are interested in the trust either as trustees or beneficiaries (l).

The court may order the costs and expenses of and incident to an application for an order appointing a new trustee to be paid or raised out of the real or personal property in respect whereof the order is made, or out of the income thereof, or to be borne and paid in such manner and by such persons as to the court may seem just (m).

Rev., Vol. VIII., Lunatic, England, pp. 3, 9). The application may be made by a person who has a contingent interest in the trust property (Re Sheppard's Trusts (1862), 4 De G. F. & J. 423, C. A.). Married women can apply for the appointment of new trustees without the concurrence of their husbands (Re Outwin's (G.) Trusts (1883), 48 L. T. 410). The president and secretary of the Wesleyan Conference have been held capable of applying for the appointment of new trustees of a Wesleyan chapel (Re Harden Wesleyan Chapel (1853), 1 W. R. 212). (CH.) 69; Re Nicholson's Trusts, [1884] W. N. 76; Hyde v. Benbow, [1884] W. N. 117), or who is permanently resident abroad (Re Stewart (1860), 8 W. R. 297, C. A.; Re Bignold's Settlement Trusts (1872), 7 Ch. App. 223; Re Pye's Trusts (1880), 42 L. T. 247). In the High Court an application under the Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), must be entitled in the matter of the Act (Gough v. Bage (1871), 25 L. T. 738), and must be made in the Chancery Division (R. S. C., Ord. 54B, r. 1), and ordinarily by summons (R. S. C., Ord. 55, r. 13A); but in a complicated case it may be made by petition (R. S. C., Ord. 54B, r. 2; Re Morris's Settlement Trusts (1889), 60 L. T. 96). It must not be made by action (Thomas v. Walker (1854), 18 Beav. 521).

by court.

The order and any consequential vesting order or conveyance (o) does not operate as a discharge to any former or continuing trustee further or otherwise than an appointment of new trustees under a power for that purpose contained in an instrument of trust would have operated (p).

(b) Cases in which Appointment will be Made.

161. Where the instrument creating the trust contains no power to appoint new trustees, and no trustee named therein is alive when the instrument comes into operation, an application to the court to appoint new trustees is necessary, since there is no one who is enabled under the Trustee Act, 1893 (q), to make the appointment (r).

No trustees.

162. Where one of the original trustees is an infant, and inconvenience to the trust estate is caused thereby, the court appoints a new trustee in his place (s).

The court may make any order for the appointment of a new trustee in substitution for a trustee who is convicted of felony or is a bankrupt (b); but the statutory provision does not authorise the appointment of a person to be executor or administrator (c).

Such person, if the personal representative, has an absolute right to decline to accept the position and duties of trustee (o), and is liable at any time to be deprived of the office and powers by the appointment of new trustees (p), after which he will not remain a trustee, unless he is thereby appointed a new trustee (q). Subject to any direction to the contrary in the instrument creating the trust, the legal personal representatives or representative of a sole trustee, or of a last surviving or continuing trustee, may, until the appointment of new trustees, exercise or perform any power or trust given to or capable of being exercised by the sole or last surviving or continuing trustee (a).

A person impliedly accepts the office of trustee if he personally interferes with the trust property (i), or otherwise acts in the trust (k), or allows proceedings in reference to the trust property to be instituted (l), or dealings with the trust property to be carried on (m) in his name. A person who is named an executor and trustee in a will is deemed, if he proves the will, to accept the trusts of the will both as to personal property (n) and as to real property (o).

The disclaimer involves disclaimer of any benefit annexed to the office (e), but does not prevent acceptance of an independent benefit conferred by the instrument of trust (f).
- No formal act or instrument is necessary to effect the disclaimer or refusal (g); but in order to furnish evidence of the fact and to render it impossible for the person subsequently either to assume to act or to be charged with acting as a trustee, a disclaimer by deed is convenient and proper (h).
- A trustee who has refused to act in a trust but has not executed a deed of disclaimer may, in legal proceedings in relation to the trust, disclaim by counsel at the bar of the court (i).
- Where a testator has appointed a person an executor and also a trustee, the fact of his renouncing probate and not acting as trustee is strong evidence that he has refused the trust (k), and is conclusive evidence of such refusal if the duties of executor are by the will inseparable from the duties of the trust (l).

The deed operates as a disclaimer of the trust property as well as of the trust; and a release of the trust property by a disclaiming trustee to his co-trustees is improper, as purporting to accept and deal with the property (Crewe v. Dicken (1798), 4 Ves. 97; Urch v. Walker (1838), 3 My. & Cr. 702; and see p. 83, ante); but it is not fatal to the disclaimer if the intention to disclaim is otherwise clear (*Nicloson v. is good if the trustee who executes it has never in the meantime acted or consented to act in the trust (m). Where, however, a trustee does not, until after the lapse of many years, by deed disclaim the trust or expressly decline to act therein, the fact of his not having executed the instrument of trust is not sufficient to prove his non-acceptance of the trust, and additional strong evidence is necessary to prove that he has not accepted it and that the trust property is not vested in him (n).

181. A disclaimer or refusal to act in the trust takes effect ab initio and vests the trust property, as from the date when the trust disposition came into operation, exclusively in the trustees who consent to act (o). If all the trustees disclaim, the property reverts in the disposer, or, if he is dead, in his legal representative, who becomes, by operation of law, the trustee thereof for the purposes of the trust (p). Effect on trust property.

182. The disclaimer of the trustee, or of all the trustees nominated by the disposer, does not avoid the trust (q); but a new trustee will be appointed by a court of equity to execute it (r). Trust not affected.

183. A trustee who disclaims is entitled to his expenses of disclaiming out of the trust fund (s), and to his costs of any proceedings to which he is made a party on the footing of being a trustee (t), except so far as he incurs or occasions costs beyond those actually incidental to making good his disclaimer (a). Public
Trustee.

185. Subject to the Public Trustee Act, 1906 (e), and to the rules thereunder for the time being in force (f), the Public Trustee (g), if he consents to act as such (h) with respect to any trust created by any trust instrument or arising upon an intestacy, except the trusts of an instrument made solely by way of security for money, and whether or not the number of trustees has been reduced below the original number (i), may be appointed to be custodian trustee (k), either (1) by an order of a court of competent jurisdiction made on the application of a person entitled to apply for the appointment of a new trustee; or (2) by the testator, settlor, or other creator of a trust; or (3) by the person having power to appoint new trustees (l).

(1885), 29 Ch. D. 693; Re Cunningham and Frayling, [1891] 2 Ch. 567, per STIRLING, J., at pp. 571, 572. A bare trustee may originally have had duties in respect of the property which have since ceased (Christie v. Ovington (1875), 1 Ch. D. 279, per HALL, V.-C., at p. 281), or which have been superseded by a request from the persons entitled to the property to convey it to them (Morgan v. Swansea Urban Sanitary Authority (1878), 9 Ch. D. 582, per JESSEL, M.R., at p. 585). A person who has himself an existing beneficial interest of any kind in the trust property is in no circumstances a bare trustee of it (Lysaght v. Edwards (1876), 2 Ch. D. 499, per JESSEL, M.R., at p. 506). But trustees for sale, after selling the property under an order of court to a purchaser who has paid the purchase-money into court, are bare trustees of it, notwithstanding that they have a beneficial interest in the proceeds of sale, since their beneficial interest in the property itself has ceased, and they have no duty to perform in respect of it except to convey it to the purchaser (Re Docwra, Docwra v. Faith (1885), 29 Ch. D. 693). Where a passive trust was created to preserve contingent remainders, or to bar dower, or to keep alive an incumbrance or for some other purpose, the trustee might never have any function to perform in respect of the property (1 Hayes' Conveyancing, pp. 103—109). reason of the trustees named in the will disclaiming the trust (c), the legal representative can execute a trust which imposes no other duty than simply to clothe the equitable ownership with the legal estate (d). Where, however, the trust is in the form of a power of leasing or of some other trust or power requiring the exercise of judgment and discretion, he cannot, though he holds the property subject to the trust, execute the trust or exercise the power, even though it may have been obligatory on the trustees named in the will to execute it (e).

A person buying real estate with notice of the rights of another therein is a trustee for him in respect thereof (Loke Yew v. Port Swettenham Rubber Co., Ltd., [1913] A. C. 494, P. C.). As to what is constructive notice, see Cookson v. Lee (1853), 23 L. J. (CH.) 473, C. A. A person is held to have constructive notice of the trust if he abstains from making proper inquiries which would have led to his discovering its existence (Justice v. Wynne (1860), 12 I. Ch. R. 289, C. A., per BALL, J., at pp. 310,

194. In order to constitute a person who takes trust property or trust money for his own purposes a constructive trustee of it he must have notice that it is being misapplied by being transferred to him, or, in other words, he must be party to a fraud or breach of trust on the part of the actual trustee (l).

(b) Acquisition without Notice of Trust.

195. A person who, without notice of the trust, acquires property or an interest in property which is in fact subject to a subsisting trust, takes the property as a trustee and subject to the performance of the trust, if he acquires gratuitously either the legal estate (n) or an equitable interest in the property (n); or if he acquires for valuable consideration an equitable interest in the property without the right to call for the legal estate (o); in the latter case, however, he can protect himself from the trust by afterwards getting in the legal estate from a person who commits no breach of trust in parting with it to him (p), although he cannot do so by obtaining the legal estate from a person who is not justified in equity in transferring it to him (a). On the other hand, he takes the property discharged from the trust if he acquires the legal estate in the property for valuable consideration (b), or acquires an equitable interest in it for valuable consideration, and at the same time acquires a paramount right to call for the legal estate (c).

(c) Receipt of Trust Money.

196. A banker, broker, solicitor, or other stranger to the trust, receiving money from a trustee which he knows to be part of the trust property, does not become a constructive trustee thereof (d), unless he knows that the money is being applied in a manner inconsistent with the trust, or, in other words, unless he is a party either to a fraud or to a breach of trust on the part of the trustee (e). In so far as such money remains in the disposition of the trustee the cestuis que trust may follow it and claim it as against the trustee (f).

(1742), 2 Atk. 242; M'Queen v. Farquhar (1805), 11 Ves. 467, per Lord ELDON, L.C., at p. 478). The only exception to the rule which protects a purchaser with notice who takes from a purchaser without notice is that which prevents a trustee from buying back trust property which he has sold, or a person who has acquired property by fraud from saying that he sold it to a bonâ fide purchaser without notice and has repurchased it from him (Barrow's Case (1880), 14 Ch. Hallett, supra*). But, as between two cestuis que trust whose money a trustee has so paid into his private account, the rule in *Devaynes v. (iv.) By Intermeddling with the Trust.

SECT. 2.

Commencement of Office.Trustee de son tort.

197. A person who, not being a trustee (g) and not having authority from a trustee, takes upon himself to intermeddle with trust matters or to do acts characteristic of the office of trustee, makes himself a trustee de son tort—a trustee of his own wrong, or, as it is also termed, a constructive trustee (h). The responsibility which attaches to a trustee may extend in equity to a person who is not properly a trustee, if he either makes himself a trustee de son tort or actually participates in any fraudulent conduct of a trustee to the injury of the cestui que trust (i).

A person who is employed as solicitor or agent for trust property may become a constructive trustee or trustee de son tort by intermeddling with the performance of the trust (k), or by dealing with the property in a manner not warranted by the terms of his employment or agency (l), or in a manner inconsistent with the performance of trusts of which he is cognisant (m). A person does not, however, become a constructive trustee merely by acting as the solicitor or agent of trustees in transactions within their legal powers, although of a character of which a court of equity would disapprove, unless he receives and becomes chargeable with some part of the trust property, or unless he knowingly assists in a dishonest and fraudulent act on the part of the trustees (n).

Solicitors and agents.

(g) A person whose acts are referable to his appointment as a trustee is not to be deemed a trustee de son tort (Mara v. Browne, [1896] 1 Ch. 199, C. A., per Lord HERSHELL, at p. 207).

(h) Re Barney, Barney v. Barney, [1892] 2 Ch. 265; Mara v. Browne, supra, per A. L. SMITH, L.J., at p. 209; see p. 47, ante. A person who, without having been validly appointed, acts as trustee, is liable as such (Rackham v. Siddall (1850), 1 Mac. & G. 607, C. A., per Lord COTTENHAM, L.C., at p. 621; Pearce v. Pearce (1856), 22 Beav. 248; Hennessey v. Bray (1863), 33 Beav. 96, 102). If a person, not expressly a trustee, buys property, or otherwise traffics, with the money of another, the law raises a trust by implication and clothes that person with a fiduciary character for the purpose of making him accountable (Docker v. Somes (1834), 2 My. & K. 655, per Lord BROUGHAM, L.C., at p. 665; compare Re Franklyn, Franklyn v. Franklyn (1913), 30 T. L. R. 187, C. A.). It is not within the scope of a solicitor's business to constitute himself a constructive trustee, and, therefore, his doing so does not bind and make liable as a constructive trustee a partner who is not aware of the dealings establishing the constructive trusteeship (Mara v. Browne, supra, at pp. 208, 212, 214; but see Blyth v. Fladgate, Morgan v. Blyth, Smith v. Blyth, [1891] 1 Ch. 337).

The fact that a person has had trust funds in his hands as solicitor to the trustees does not make him chargeable as a constructive trustee (Re Spencer, Spencer v. Hart (1881), 51 L. J. (CH.) 271, C. A., per BAGGALLAY, L.J., at p. 273; Brinsden v. Williams, [1894] 3 Ch. 185; Plaskitt v. Eddis (1898), 79 L. T. 136).

198. Where property is given to a person upon trust, there is a presumption that the property is given to him entirely as a trustee and not to any extent beneficially (o). Where, however, the trust does not exhaust the whole beneficial interest in the property, this presumption can be rebutted by an indication in the instrument of disposition that he is intended to take the residue of it for his own benefit (p).

A gift of property by will to a person upon trust to carry out certain purposes creates a resulting trust of so much as is not required for the fulfilment of those purposes (q); but under a gift to a person subject to the carrying out of certain purposes, described in the will as trusts or charges, he takes the property beneficially after the purposes have been fulfilled (r).

Where a testator gives specific portions of his personal property to his executors upon trust, and elsewhere in the will calls them trustees, he does not thereby constitute them trustees of the rest of his personal property (*Batteley v. A gift of property to persons named as executors and trustees, to be disposed of to such person or persons and in such manner and proportion as they think proper, has been held an absolute beneficial gift to them (Gibbs v. Ong Cheah Neo (1875), L. R. 6 C. P. 381). Where property is devised or bequeathed to a trustee upon certain trusts subject to the payment of legacies or other charges, he is a trustee only in respect of the designated trusts and not in respect of the legacies and charges, and no express trust is created for their payment (*Cunningham v. A gift to a person for a trust or purpose, which he is left at liberty either to perform or not at his option, is a beneficial gift to him(s). The trust or purpose in that case is rather the motive for the gift than the specific object for which it is given (t).

No act of his can restrict or prejudice the title of his cestui que trust (b).

and cestui que trust subsists, the possession of the trust property by the trustee is the possession of the cestui que trust (f). If property is given to the trustee to sell, it remains in him for that purpose until something is done to put an end to the character in which he stands; he is bound to protect the interest of the cestui que trust without the intervention of the cestui que trust; and the length of time during which he has omitted to discharge his trust is no bar to his power or duty to perform it (g).

him (k). Where such property is assured unto a trustee to the use of or in trust for some other person or persons, the legal estate vests in the other person or persons, if the assurance is by an instrument inter vivos (l); but, if the assurance is by will, the vesting of the legal estate depends upon the intention of the testator as expressed or as implied from the extent and nature of the trusts, powers and duties reposed in the trustee (m). A devise of freehold property to a trustee upon trust to stand seised to the use of a beneficiary may, in the absence of indication of a contrary intention, vest the legal estate in the trustee (n).

Before these enactments, where real property was devised to trustees for particular purposes, it was held that the legal estate therein was vested in them as long as the execution of the trust required it, and no longer; and that as soon as the purposes were satisfied, it vested in the person beneficially entitled to the property (*Doe d. Under a devise of freehold and copyhold lands to trustees in trust for a son, to be transferred to him as soon as he should attain twenty-one years, and in case he should die before attaining that age then to another person, his heirs and assigns, the trustees were held to take an estate determinable when the son attained twenty-one years, since that fully effectuated the purposes of the will (*Doe d. being carried into effect does not cut down the estate of a trustee under a will which might continue for a longer period (d). An estate in a trustee dependent on a purpose respecting the trust property or the income thereof which he is directed to carry out (1) does not come into being if the purpose is dependent on a contingency which never arises (e) or fails by reason of its illegality (f), and (2) is determined when the purpose ceases on an event contemplated by the instrument creating the trust (g), but (3) is not determined by the accomplishment of the purpose (h), unless the instrument so directs (i).

207. As regards freehold, copyhold and leasehold property, where there is an indefinite devise of property to trustees and their heirs upon trust either to pay or allow a beneficiary to receive the rents during life, or for a purpose which does not require for its performance that they should have the entire estate, and this devise is followed either (1) by a simple remainder to another person in fee simple or in fee tail, or (2) by an absolute interest as another person shall appoint, or (3) by a new devise to a person in fee simple or fee tail, or otherwise giving an absolute interest, the estate of the trustees is by implication limited to the life of the first beneficiary or to the duration of the purpose for which the trust is created (k).

208. Where an estate is given to trustees, all the trusts which they are to perform must, at least primâ facie, be performed by them by virtue and in respect of the estate vested in them (l). Where one of the duties imposed on them is to sell the trust estate if they should deem the sale expedient, they can only do this by exercising dominion over the fee simple, and therefore in such case, even without apt words, there would be strong reason for holding that they were intended to take the fee (m); but where the purposes of a

SECT. 3.

Trust
Property.

Recurring
trusts.

Particular trusts and duties :—

tion of rents and profits.

trust on which an estate is devised to trustees are such as not to require a fee in them, then, if subject to the specified trusts the estate is given over, the parties taking under such devise over take legal estates, the estate given to the trustees being taken to have been meant to be co-extensive only with the trust to be performed (n).

Where, therefore, there are recurring occasions for the exercise of active duties by trustees constituted by a will and no repeated devises to them to enable them to perform their duties, the legal estate, if once in the trustees, is deemed to be vested in them throughout, notwithstanding the duration in the meantime of what would, but for the recurring duties, be construed as uses executed in the beneficiaries (o).

209. In the following cases trustees take the entire estate or an estate so long as the particular trust continues :—

A devise to trustees upon trust to pay over the rents and profits of freehold property to a beneficiary during his life vests the legal estate in them during his life (p). On the other hand, if the trust is to permit and suffer the beneficiary to take the rents and profits during his life, he takes the legal estate for his life (q). Even in the latter case, however, the legal estate remains vested in the trustees if there is any direction or any indication of an intention that they shall actively interfere (r), as, for instance, if the beneficiary is to receive the rents and profits with the approbation of the trustees (s), or is only to receive the net rents and profits, which implies that the trustees shall pay the outgoings (t), or if the trust is for the separate use of a female beneficiary, in which case the necessity of protecting her interest is held to vest the estate in the trustees (u).

Smith* (1603), Moore (K. B.), 753; Bush v. Allen (1695), 5 Mod. Rep. 63, 101 (HOLT, C.J., dissenting); Anthony v. Rees (1831), 2 Cr. & J. 75; but see *London and South-Western Rail. Co. v. Where the trust is, in the alternative, to pay the rents and profits to a beneficiary or permit him to receive them during his life, it has been held that if the trust is in a deed the first alternative prevails and vests the legal estate in the trustee (a), but that if it is in a will effect will be given to the second alternative so as to vest the legal estate in the beneficiary (b).

Where real property is devised to trustees upon trust to convey it to the person or persons designated in the will, they take the entire legal estate, since without it they cannot convey the property (c). If, however, the trust is preceded by a trust to permit a beneficiary to occupy a house and to receive the rents and profits during his life or until another person attains twenty-one years, the legal estate vests in the beneficiary for his life or until the other person attains twenty-one years (d).

A devise to trustees upon trust to pay debts or legacies, or an annuity, vests the legal estate in them for that purpose, even if there is a trust to permit a person to receive the rents (e), but in such a case a devise to trustees of property merely charged with such payments has not that effect (f). Where, however, under the language of the will, trustees who are also executors take the legal estate, during the life of a beneficiary, in real property charged with payment of debts, the charge of debts which as executors they are bound to pay has the effect of extending their legal estate beyond the life of the beneficiary (g).

If a trustee holds shares in a company, he has the same liabilities in respect of them as if he was beneficial owner thereof, even though the fact of the trusteeship is noted in the company's books, but is entitled to indemnity (o).

Similarly, any estate or interest of inheritance, or limited to the heir as special occupant (c), in any corporeal or incorporeal hereditaments, other than copyhold or customary land vested in the tenant on the court rolls (d), vested in such trustee on any trust, devolves to and becomes vested in his personal representatives or representative from time to time, notwithstanding any testamentary disposition by him, in like manner as if it were a chattel real; and the like powers for one only of several joint personal representatives, as well as for a single personal representative and for all the personal representatives together, to dispose of and otherwise deal with the property belong to his personal representatives or representative for the time being, with all the like incidents, but subject to all the like rights, equities and obligations, as if it were a chattel real vesting in them or him (e). Where he is a trustee of copyhold or customary land of which he is tenant on the court rolls, the land descends on his death to his customary heir (f).

(ii.) On Change of Trustee.

Tenure
and Trans-

Property.

Necessity for vesting.

Vesting
declaration.

216. On an appointment of new trustees the trust property ought to be vested in all the persons who, after the appointment, are the trustees thereof (g). The transfer by which this is effected, though it is frequently made previously to or by the same instrument as the appointment, ought, in strictness, to be made only after the appointment has been completed (h).

217. Where a deed by which a new trustee is appointed to perform a trust contains a declaration by the appointor to the effect that any estate or interest in any land or chattel subject to the trust, or the right to recover and receive any debt or thing in action subject to the trust, is to vest in the persons who by virtue of the deed become and are the trustees for performing the trust, the declaration, without any conveyance or assignment, operates to vest the estate, interest or right in those persons as joint tenants and for the purposes of the trust (i). Similarly, where a deed by which a retiring trustee is discharged under the power given by statute (j) contains a similar declaration by the retiring and continuing trustees and by the other persons, if any, empowered to appoint trustees, the declaration, without any conveyance or assignment, operates to vest the estate, interest or right to which it relates in the continuing trustees alone as joint tenants and for the purposes of the trust (k). The declaration cannot in either case extend to or include a legal estate or interest in copyhold or customary land, or land conveyed by way of mortgage for securing money subject to the trust, or any share, stock, annuity or property which is only transferable in books kept by a company or other body, or in manner directed by or under Act of Parliament (l).

Registration.

For the purpose of the registration of the deed in any registry, the person or persons making the declaration are deemed the conveying party or parties, and the conveyance is deemed to be made by him or them under a statutory power (m).

219. Where a person becomes a convict within the meaning of the Forfeiture Act, 1870 (o), trust property vested in him, exclusive of any beneficial interest which he has therein, does not vest in an administrator appointed under that Act, but remains in him or survives to his co-trustee, or descends to his representative, as if he had not become a convict (p).

220. Where a person becomes bankrupt, property held by him on trust for another person does not pass to his trustee in bankruptcy, but remains vested in him upon the trust to which it is subject (q).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Vesting Orders.

(i.) In General.

221. By statute (r) the High Court, and in cases within their respective jurisdictions a palatine court (s) and a county court (t), may make a vesting order as to trust property, and as to property which, for the purposes of those powers, is deemed to be held by a person as a trustee (a), where it is impossible or difficult to deal with the property without such order (b).

SECT. 3.

Tenure
and Transmission of Trust
Property.Estate
vesting under the order.Effect of vesting order.

Where the order is consequential on the appointment of a new trustee, the land is vested for such estate as the court directs in the persons who on the appointment are the trustees (e). Where the order relates to a trustee entitled jointly with another person, and the trustee is out of the jurisdiction of the court or cannot be found, the land or right is vested in such other person either alone or with some other person (f).

225. A vesting order, where it is consequential on the appointment of a new trustee, has the same effect as if the persons who before the appointment were the trustees, if any, had duly executed all proper conveyances of the land for such estate as the court directs, or if there is no such person, or no such person of full capacity, then as if such person had existed and been of full capacity, and had duly executed all proper conveyances of the land for such estate as the court directs; and in every other case a vesting order has the same effect as if the trustee or other person, or description or class of persons, to whose rights or supposed rights the statutory provisions as to vesting orders relate, had been an ascertained and existing person of full capacity, and had executed a conveyance or release to the effect intended by the order (g).

Order
conclusive.

226. Where a vesting order is made as to land under the Trustee Act, 1893 (h), or under the Lunacy Act, 1890 (i), founded on an allegation of the personal incapacity of a trustee, or on an allegation that a trustee is out of the jurisdiction of the court or cannot be found, or that it is uncertain which of several trustees was the survivor, or whether the last trustee is living or dead, or on an allegation that a trustee has died intestate without an heir, or has died and it is not known who is his heir or personal representative or devisee, the fact that the order has been so made is conclusive evidence of the matter so alleged in any court upon any question as to the validity of the order (k).

228. Where land is subject to a contingent right in an unborn person or class of unborn persons who, on coming into existence, would in respect thereof become entitled to or possessed of the land on trust, the court may make an order releasing the land from the contingent right or vesting in any person the estate to or of which the unborn person or class of unborn persons would, on coming into existence, be entitled or possessed in the land (m).

229. Where a court gives judgment or makes an order directing the sale or mortgage of land, every person who is entitled to or possessed of the land or a contingent right therein, and is a party to the action or proceeding in which the judgment or order is given or made, or is otherwise bound by the judgment or order, is deemed to be so entitled or possessed, as the case may be, as a trustee within the meaning of the Trustee Act, 1893 (n); and the court may, if it thinks expedient, make an order vesting the land, or any part thereof, for such estate as may seem fit, in the purchaser or mortgagee or in any other person (a).

230. Where a judgment is given for the specific performance of a contract concerning land or for the partition or sale in lieu of partition or exchange of any land, or generally where a judgment is given for the conveyance of land, either in cases arising out of the doctrine of election or otherwise, the court may declare that any of the parties to the action are trustees of the land or any part thereof within the meaning of the Trustee Act, 1893 (b), and may declare that the interests of unborn persons who might claim under any party to the action, or under the will or voluntary settlement of any deceased person who was during his lifetime a party to the contract or transaction concerning which the judgment is given, are the interests of persons who, on coming into existence, would be trustees within the meaning of the Trustee Act, 1893 (b), and thereupon the court may make a vesting order relating to the rights of those persons, born and unborn, as if they had been trustees (c).

238. Where a lunatic or person of unsound mind is solely or jointly seised or possessed of any land (q) upon trust, or is solely or jointly entitled to any stock or chose in action upon trust, the High Court has, under the Lunacy Acts, 1890 to 1911 (r), powers of making vesting orders, or of appointing a person to convey the land or release contingent rights in it, or to transfer the stock, similar to those which by the Trustee Act, 1893 (s), are conferred on the court having jurisdiction under that Act (t). The procedure relating to orders under the Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), applies (R. S. C., Ord. 55, r. 13b). Before the Lunacy Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 40), these powers were exercisable by the judge in Lunacy; and it was sometimes necessary to make an application and to draw up the order thereon both in the Chancery Division of the High Court and in Lunacy (Re Stewart (1860), 8 W. R. 297, C. A.; Re Boyce (1864), 4 De G. J. & Sm. 205, C. A.; Re M., [1899] 1 Ch. 79).

It may be made where the trustee is a criminal lunatic (Re R., [1906] 1 Ch. 730, C. A.), or where, under a power for that purpose contained in the instrument of trust, a new trustee has been appointed in place of a lunatic trustee (Re East (a Person of Unsound Mind not so Found by Inquisition), Re Bellwood's Will Trusts (1873), 8 Ch. App. 735). Applications for vesting orders are governed by the same rules and principles as applications for the appointment of new trustees; see p. 78, ante. The application should be served on the committee of a lunatic trustee (Re Saumarez (1856), 8 De G. M. & G. 390, C. A.), but need not be served on a trustee of unsound mind not so found (Re East (a Person of Unsound Mind not so Found by Inquisition), Re Bellwood's Will Trusts, supra; Re Green (a Person of Unsound Mind not so Found), Re Murton's Trusts (1875), 10 Ch. Court in the case of a lunatic trustee who is an infant or who is out of the jurisdiction (u), or in a case in which there has been an order for sale (w), is not affected by the provisions of the Lunacy Acts.

The order may vest the property in the other trustees (a); but such an order is, it seems, only made when the land is immediately divisible (b), and not when the trustees have continuing duties to perform (c).

Where a trustee has become lunatic it has been the practice to appoint a new trustee and not to vest the trust property directly in the beneficiary (d).

239. Where the judge in Lunacy orders the committee of the estate of a lunatic to exercise in the name and on behalf of the lunatic a power of appointing a new trustee which is vested in the lunatic (e), he may make any order respecting the property which, under the Trustee Act, 1893 (f), might have been made on the appointment of a new trustee thereunder (g).

the execution of a trust (k); but a trustee, who has accepted a trust, cannot from mere caprice or other trivial cause, or owing to some act or circumstances affecting himself personally, throw up the trust at the expense of the cestui que trust (l). He may, however, insist on being discharged at the expense of the trust property, if he has served for a long time and is of advanced age and in failing health (m), or if much litigation has taken place (n), or other difficult circumstances have arisen in connexion with the trust which did not exist and were not contemplated when he undertook the office (o). In such cases, if he cannot otherwise obtain his discharge, he may apply for it to a court of equity in an action to administer the trust (p), and he is not bound to show that there is some other person ready to accept the trust (q). If no person is willing to do so it may be necessary to postpone the discharge of the trustee and keep him before the court; but if this is done the court takes care that he shall not suffer thereby (r).

If a new trustee has not been effectually appointed, the retiring trustee remains liable (Pearce v. Pearce (1856), 22 Beav. 248).

one of them may by deed declare that he desires to be discharged from the trust; in that case, if his co-trustees and the other person, if any, who is empowered to appoint trustees of the trust consent by deed to his discharge and to the vesting of the trust property in the co-trustees alone, he is deemed to have retired from the trust, and is by the deed discharged therefrom, without any new trustee being appointed in his place (c). When the Public Trustee is appointed a trustee or co-trustee may retire under the above provision without the consents thereby required and notwithstanding that there are not more than two trustees (d).

SECT. 4.
Vacation of Office.

243. Where a trustee is justified in retiring, he is not liable to pay any costs occasioned thereby; but whether he is entitled to his own costs in the matter depends on the circumstances of the case (e). A trustee on retiring, and the representative of a deceased trustee on transferring the trust property to a new trustee, has a right to an examined copy of the deed appointing the new trustee, but not to a duplicate thereof, or to an attested copy of the instrument creating the trust (f).

Costs and rights of

244. Where a trustee retires in favour of another person in consideration of a sum of money paid to him by that person, a court of equity will declare the deed containing the appointment of that person as trustee to be void, so that the trust and the trust property will remain in the trustees in whom they were vested before it was executed (g).

Corrupt
retirement.

245. A trustee who retires in favour of a new trustee, with the knowledge or suspicion that a breach of trust is intended to be committed after his retirement, is liable for any loss occasioned by the breach of trust (h). If one of two trustees who feels no confidence in his co-trustee retires in favour of a new trustee appointed by that co-trustee, he renders himself liable to grave risk in the event of any subsequent misconduct on the part of the continuing trustee and the new trustee (i).

Resumption of trust. 247. A trustee who has retired from the trust cannot after the lapse of several years resume his position as trustee without being formally reappointed (l), notwithstanding that his retirement and the appointment of his successor were not formally effected (m).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Removal.

Removal by appointment of new trustee. 248. A trustee can be removed from the trust by the appointment of a new trustee in his place in any circumstances in which the power, if any, in the instrument creating the trust or the statutory power (n) authorises such an appointment (o).

Removal by the court. 249. The court removes a trustee where he refuses to execute the trust (p), or has mismanaged the trust (q), or has disqualified himself by his circumstances or conduct from continuing to hold the office (r), and may, perhaps, do so if his continuance in office would be likely to be detrimental to the trust owing to his being out of sympathy with the objects of it (s) or with the cestuis que trust (a). R. 73), or a trustee who has become bankrupt, where in administering the trust he has to receive or deal with trust money so that he has the opportunity of misappropriating it (Re Barker's Trusts (1875), 1 Ch. D. 43; Re Adams' Trust (1879), 12 Ch. D. 634), or where, besides the bankruptcy, he has acted in a manner prejudicial to the trust (Re Betts, Maclean v. Betts (1897), 41 Sol. Jo. 209). Friction or hostility between a trustee and the person who has the present beneficial interest in the trust property is not of itself a reason for the removal of the trustee; but it is taken into account, where it is grounded on the mode in which the trust has been administered, or where it has arisen wholly or partially out of substantial overcharges by the trustee against the trust property (Letterstedt v. Broers (1884), 9 App. Cas. 371, 389, P. C.).

SUB-SECT. 5.—Release.

Right of trustee to release.

256. Where there is an instrument declaring a clearly defined trust, and the trustee pays the income or transfers the capital of the trust property in strict accordance with the trust, he may on the termination of the trust require an acknowledgment that the accounts are settled (q), but he has no right to require a release under seal (r). where it exceeds in amount the sum due on the mortgage and the trustee has notice of subsequent incumbrances on it (Re Bell, Jeffery v. Sayles, [1896] 1 Ch. 1, C. A. ; Hockey v. Western, [1898] 1 Ch. 350, 356, C. A.).

Where a trustee is called upon to part with the trust property on the ground that the cestui que trust has put an end to the trust, he is entitled to clear evidence of the fact that the trust is at an end, including the production of any deed or document which has effected that result (Holford v. Phipps (1841), 3 Beav. 434) ; and he is entitled to his costs of legal proceedings instituted to compel him to part with the trust property, where sufficient evidence of the termination of the trust has not been previously produced to him (ibid.). The existence of this power of terminating the trust may render valid a disposition which would otherwise transgress the rule against perpetuities ; see title PERPETUITIES, Vol. XXII., pp. 319, 326, 327.

A trustee is not in all cases entitled to a formal deed of release ; in many cases the receipt of the cestui que trust is a sufficient discharge (Re Roberts's Trusts (1869), 38 L. J. (CH.) 708, per MALINS, V.-C., at p. 709). The desire for a release on the part of trustees is not encouraged ; a receipt from a person entitled to money is the best release for the payment of it (Re Hoskin's Trusts (1877), 5 Ch. D. 229, per MALINS, V.-C., at p. 234), and no more can be required where executors or trustees are the persons entitled to receive trust money (Re Cater's Trusts (No. 2) (1858), 25 Beav. 366, per ROMILLY, M.R., at p. 367 ; Re Hoskin's Trusts, supra).

property, or where the trustee is required to deal with the property in a manner differing from the strict tenor of the trust, he can legally demand a release by deed (s). Where a cestui que trust has settled his share of the trust property, the trustee is entitled to a release from him, but can only require a receipt from the trustees to whom it is to be transferred (t).

Part III.—Administration of Trusts.

SECT. 1.—Duties of Trustees.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

257. The first duty of a trustee is to acquaint himself with the terms of the trust under which he acts (a), and with the state of the trust property (b), and with the contents of all such deeds, notices, and other documents and papers relating to or affecting the trust property, as come into his possession or under his control (c).

Acquaintance with the trust and its affairs.

258. A trustee must take all reasonable and proper measures to obtain possession of the trust property if it is outstanding (d), and to get in all debts and funds due to the trust estate (e), and to and preservation of trust

property.

preserve it and secure it from loss (f) or risk of loss (g). If necessary, he must institute legal proceedings to effect its security or recovery (h); and he should, where he has a reasonable prospect of being able to do so successfully, defend actions brought against him in respect of the trust property (i). or interest to fall into arrear (Tebbs v. Carpenter (1816), 1 Madd. 290, 297, 298). Unless expressly authorised to forbear doing so, he must enforce a bond or covenant in favour of the trust estate entered into by the creator of the trust (Luther v. Bianconi (1860), 10 I. Ch. R. 194; Woodhouse v. Woodhouse (1869), L. R. 8 Eq. 514, per STUART, V.-C., at p. 520; Re Brogden, Billing v. Brogden (1888), 38 Ch. D. 546, C. A.).

Where a trustee has taken reasonable precautions, he is not liable if the trust property is stolen or lost without default on his part while in his possession (Jones v. Lewis (1751), 2 Ves. Sen. 240; Job v. Job (1877), 6 Ch. D. 562; Jobson v. Palmer, [1893] 1 Ch. 71); and a trustee has been held not liable for loss through the fraud of his solicitor's clerk (Re Smith, Smith v. Thompson (1902), 18 T. L. R. 432; compare Evans Williams v. Byron (1902), 18 T. L. R. 172). But he is liable for the loss of title deeds unless he can show that it was due to inevitable accident and not to negligence on his part (*Brown v. Except where otherwise directed or authorised by the instrument creating the trust, a trustee ought to get in trust property invested in trade or in any other hazardous manner (Kirkman v. De Pothonier, [1900] 2 Ch. 529), and not with a solicitor (Field v. Field, [1894] 1 Ch. 425). Where the trust property consists of chattels, an inventory of them ought to be made and kept (Temple v. Thring (1887), 56 L. J. (CH.) 767). 259. A trustee must not connive at or knowingly facilitate any act or conduct of another person which would involve a breach of trust or occasion loss or risk to the trust property (l); and he must not set up or abet an adverse title or claim of another person against his cestui que trust (m), or undertake a duty or put himself in a position which is inconsistent with his duty as trustee (n), or act in a manner inconsistent with that duty (o). He must assume the validity of the equitable title of his cestui que trust until it is actually negatived (p). At the same time, he has a right to know the title of those who pretend to be his cestuis que trust (q); and if he receives notice of an adverse claim and of an intention to hold him liable in case he disregards it, he may obtain a decision of the court as to his course of action (r).

law to the administration of the trust (a). The fact of a trust being administered by the court does not absolve the trustee from his duties with respect to it (b).

It may be in some circumstances necessary or beneficial that a trustee should deviate from the strict letter of his trust; but in that case he does so under the obligation and at the peril of afterwards satisfying the court that the deviation was necessary or beneficial (c), unless he is relieved or debarred from observing the directions contained in the instrument creating or regulating the trust (1) by the request and consent of all the beneficiaries, where all of them are sui juris and concur (d); or (2) by an order of a court of competent jurisdiction (e); or (3) by an overriding statute (f); or (4) by the fact that the directions are illegal (g), or are incapable of being observed (h).

Trustee must use diligence and prudence.

A trustee is bound to execute the trust with fidelity and reasonable diligence (i), and ought to conduct its affairs in the same manner as an ordinary prudent man of business would conduct his own affairs; but beyond this he is not bound to adopt further precautions (k). In cases of doubt or difficulty he may take legal advice

Where a bribe is paid to a trustee to induce him to sell or let trust property, the sale or lease will be void (Chandler v. Bradley, [1897] 1 Ch. 315). It is a breach of trust for a trustee to make an advance out of the trust fund to a beneficiary, under a power for that purpose, in order to enable the beneficiary to repay a debt due to himself (Molyneux v. Fletcher, [1898] 1 Q. B. 648); though he may accept repayment out of an advance of trust money to his debtor on the security of a mortgage, if it was not made with that distinct object (*Butler v. SECT. 1.
Duties of Trustees.
Personal responsibility.

262. A trustee, being personally responsible for the exercise of his judgment and for the performance of his duty, cannot escape responsibility by leaving to another person the exercise of that judgment (a) or the performance of that duty (b), even if he is one of several trustees and the person to whom he leaves it is his co-trustee (c); nor may he allow a stranger to participate in the management and control of the trust (d). If he leaves a trust matter to a co-trustee or employs an agent, he remains liable to his cestui que trust for the acts and conduct of the co-trustee or agent (e), except so far as the law allows him to transact the affairs of the trust through a co-trustee or responsible agent (f).

A trustee is liable if he allows the trust property to remain in the custody or under the control of another person (g), except when and for so long as the affairs of the trust render it necessary or proper (h). Where there are several trustees, one of them cannot safely leave the trust property in the sole possession or under the sole control of another of them (i), except where the other is acting in the capacity of broker or agent of the trustees and is dealing with the property in that capacity (k), and except as regards title deeds and documents which for the sake of convenience may be kept by one of several co-trustees (l).

263. Where there is more than one trustee, the concurrence of all is necessary in a transaction affecting the trust property, and a majority cannot bind the minority (n). So a receipt for money given by one of two trustees will not be a discharge (n). But an ex post facto approval by one trustee of the exercise of a discretion by the other seems to be sufficient (o); and a notice of intention to renew a lease is good if given to one of two trustees (p).

trustee to hold an even hand between the parties interested under the trust, and to look to the interests of all and not to those of any particular beneficiary or class of beneficiaries (r). He must not be a partisan of one of several cestuis que trust (a).

Assigns and incum-brancers.

265. A trustee stands in the same fiduciary relation and has the same duties towards the assigns of a beneficiary or persons in whose favour a beneficiary has given a charge on the trust property as towards the beneficiary himself (b). Notwithstanding the statutory power of a mortgagee to give receipts (c), a trustee is not bound to hand over to the mortgagee of the share of a beneficiary the whole of the share which the beneficiary was entitled to receive, and does not act unreasonably in refusing to do so where, to his knowledge, a question exists as to the right of the mortgagee to the whole of the share (d). He cannot, however, require an assignee of the share of a beneficiary to deliver to him the assignment and other documents of title before handing over the share (e).

income and

266. It is the duty of a trustee to pay the income and the corpus of the trust property to the persons who are entitled to them respectively (f); when he is in doubt as to who these persons are, he

267. Unless he is authorised to do so by the instrument creating the trust, a trustee cannot make a gift or voluntary payment out of the trust property (n).

Accounts.

268. A trustee must keep an accurate account of the trust property (o), and must be always ready to render it when required (p). He is bound to furnish to a cestui que trust, or to a person authorised by him (q), on demand, information or the means of obtaining information as to the mode in which the trust property or his share therein has been invested or otherwise dealt with, and as to where it is (r) and full accounts respecting it (s), whether the cestui que trust has a present interest in the trust property or has only a contingent interest in remainder (t). If the trustee neglects or fails to do so, he is liable to the costs of proceedings to compel the information or accounts (a). He is also bound to allow a cestui que trust to inspect the trust accounts and all documents relating to the trust (b), and ought to explain to the cestui que trust what his rights are (c). A trustee is, however, entitled to receive from the cestui que trust the costs of furnishing the information or accounts, and to require the cestui que trust either to pay those costs in advance or guarantee their payment (d); and indulgence is shown to a trustee from whom an account is demanded after a long lapse of time (e).

The cestui que trust can always challenge the amount paid to or retained by a trustee out of the trust property in respect of costs, charges, and expenses incurred by himself (f).

269. A trustee is not bound to tell a cestui que trust what incumbrances the cestui que trust has himself created, or which of the incumbrancers have given notice of their charges; nor is he bound in any other way to assist the cestui que trust in selling or mortgaging his beneficial interest (g). A stranger who proposes to buy that interest or lend money on it has no greater right than the cestui que trust himself (h). If the trustee, as a matter of courtesy, answers the inquiry, he is not bound to have made previous inquiries of his co-trustees or of the solicitor to the trust, or to do anything Bouverie*, supra).

(h) Low v. Bouverie, supra, at pp. 99, 100. There is no trust or other relation between a trustee and a stranger about to deal with a cestui que trust; and although the stranger, in making inquiries, may be regarded as authorised by the cestui que trust to make them, this does not give him a right to information which the cestui que trust himself is not entitled to demand (ibid.).

more than answer honestly to the best of his actual knowledge and belief (i); and if he does this, he exposes himself to no liability, unless he binds himself by a warranty, or so expresses himself as to be estopped from afterwards denying the truth of what he said, or unless in some other way he undertakes a greater responsibility (k).

Enforcement of duty.

270. If a trustee wilfully refuses to do an act which it is his duty to do in his position of trustee, he will be compelled by a court of equity to do it (l), and may be ordered to pay the costs of any legal proceedings rendered necessary by his refusal (m).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Conversion of Trust Property.

Duty to convert.

271. It is the duty of a trustee to sell and convert the trust property (1) where the instrument creating the trust directs that it shall be sold and converted (n); (2) where the property consists of hazardous or unauthorised investments (o); and (3) where the property cannot be held to the advantage of beneficiaries for life and in

A trustee who has signed a memorandum to the effect that he has not received notice of any prior charge on the trust property after having in fact received such a notice, which he has forgotten, is not liable under the memorandum to mortgagees of the trust property who induced him to sign it under the impression that his solicitors had approved of it, whereas they were aware that this was not the case (Porter v. Moore, [1904] 2 Ch. 367).

Watts* (1852), 14 Beav. 616; Re Burrage, Burningham v. Burrage (1890), 62 L. T. 752, per CHITTY, J., at p. 753. But if, under the terms of the trust, the trustee has a discretion as to the time or manner of doing the act, the court does not interfere with the exercise of that discretion (Tempest v. Camoys (Lord) (1882), 21 Ch. D. 571, C. A.; Re Burrage, Burningham v. Burrage, supra).

(n) Re Atkins, Newman v. Sinclair (1899), 81 L. T. 421. Where this is the case, the trustee must sell or convert the property within a reasonable period (Bate v. Hooper (1855), 5 De G. M. & G. 338, C. A.; Hughes v. Empson (1856), 22 Beav. 181; Grayburn v. Clarkson (1868), 3 Ch. App. 605), even though the exact time is left in his discretion (Sculthorpe v. Tipper (1871), L. R. 13 Eq. 232; Re Atkins, Newman v. Sinclair, supra). The period is ordinarily twelve months (Bate v. Hooper, supra; Grayburn v. Clarkson, supra); but he may be bound to realise the property sooner or be justified in prolonging the period (Buxton v. Buxton (1835), 1 My. & Cr. 80; Paddon v. Richardson (1855), 7 De G. M. & G. 563, C. A.); and a trust to sell a business with all convenient speed with power to postpone sale has been held to authorise the postponement of the sale for two years (Re Smith, Arnold v. Smith, [1896] 1 Ch. 171). A power to postpone sale and conversion authorises the carrying on of a business for a reasonable period (Re Chancellor, Chancellor v. Brown (1884), 26 Ch. D. 42, C. A.). remainder, whether by reason of its being of a wasting nature (p) or of its being in reversion and not yielding a present income (q), unless the instrument creating the trust expressly or by implication requires or authorises abstention from sale and conversion (r).

SECT. 1.
Trustees.

272. If the instrument creating the trust expressly gives to the trustee a discretion as to conversion or non-conversion of the property, he may exercise it by refraining from conversion in spite of one cestui que trust being thereby benefited at the expense of another (s). With such an exercise of the discretion a court of equity does not interfere (t).

Discretion as to conversion.

SUB-SECT. 3.—Investment of Trust Funds.

273. Unless a trustee is expressly otherwise authorised or required under the terms of his trust, he must duly and promptly invest all capital trust money coming to his hands (u), and all income which cannot be immediately applied for the purposes of the trust (a); and he is liable for any loss which may result from its being improperly invested (b) or being left uninvested for an unreasonable length of time (c), and for interest during the period of its being so left (d). The investment must be made in the name of the trustee (e), and, if there are several trustees, in the name of all of them (f), except where, under the conditions of the investment, it can only be made in the name of one (g).

Mode of investment.

274. The mode in which a trustee can invest trust moneys is primarily limited by the instrument creating the trust. Subject to any express directions contained in that instrument (h), and to any conditions thereby prescribed (i), he may invest the moneys in any manner thereby authorised (k), provided that in making the selection

(h) Beauclerk v. Ashburnham (1845), 8 Beav. 322; Cadogan v. Essex (Earl) (1854), 2 Drew. 227.

(i) A common condition is the consent of one or more of the cestuis que trust, which may, generally speaking, be given either before or after the investment (Stevens v. Robertson (1868), 37 L. J. (CH.) 499, 502; but see Bateman v. Davis (1818), 3 Madd. 98). Where a cestui que trust improperly withholds his consent, the court dispenses with it (Costello v. O'Rourke (1869), 3 I. R. Eq. 172, 184).

Whiteley* (1887), 12 App. Cas. 727, per Lord WATSON, at p. 733. The instrument may authorise an investment in foreign Government bonds passing by delivery (Arnould v. Grinstead (1872), 21 W. R. 155). A direction to invest in foreign Government securities authorises an investment in the securities of a subordinate Government, such as that of one of the United States of America (Cadett v. Earle (1877), 5 Ch. D. 710); but a power to invest in the stocks or securities of a British colony or dependency does not authorise an investment in the stocks of a province of the Dominion of Canada (Re Maryon-Wilson's Estate, [1912] 1 Ch. 55, C. A.). A direction to hold existing Government securities includes Government bonds passing by delivery (Arnould v. Grinstead (1872), 21 W. R. 155). A power to leave the fund with a particular firm at interest does not authorise its being so left after a change in the personnel of the firm (Cummins v. Cummins (1845), 3 Jo. & Lat. 64; Re Tucker, Tucker v. Tucker, [1894] 1 Ch. 724; Smith v. Patrick, [1901] A. C. 282; and see Re Morrison, Morrison v. Morrison, [1901] 1 Ch. 701). An authority to retain shares in a particular company as part of the trust fund does not warrant the acquisition of additional shares in the company (Re Pugh, Banting v. Pugh, [1887] W. N. 143), or the acceptance of new shares if the company is reconstructed (Re Morris, Bucknill v. Morris (1885), 52 L. T. 462; Re Anson's Settlement, Lovelace (Earl) v. Anson, [1907] 2 Ch. 424; but see Re Smith, Smith v. Lewis, [1902] 2 Ch. 667). If bonus shares are allotted to the trustee in respect of his holding, he must at once sell them (Re Pugh, Banting v. Pugh, supra). In powers of investment, "a public company" includes any company incorporated under the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 69), or the Acts which it replaces (Re Sharp, Rickett v. Sharp (1890), 45 Ch. D. 286, C. A.; but see Re Castlehow, Lamonby v. Carter, [1903] 1 Ch. 352), and "a company incorporated by statute" includes any company incorporated by charter granted under the authority of a general Act of Parliament (Elve v. Boyton, he uses proper care and caution, and avoids investments which are attended with hazard (l).

SECT. 1.
Duties of Trustees.

275. The instrument may authorise investment on personal security (a), including the security of the personal undertaking of an individual, as well as the security of personal property (b). A loan of trust money on personal security, however, must be made in good faith and in the interests of the cestuis que trust and not merely of the borrower (c), and cannot be made unless expressly authorised (d).

Personal
security.

276. The language of the instrument of trust is strictly construed; and under a direction to trustees to invest the trust fund, or place out the trust fund at interest or on security, at their discretion, they can only invest on proper securities (e).

Investment at discretion.

Unless a trustee is expressly forbidden to do so by the instrument, if any, creating the trust (f), or unless such investment [1891] 1 Ch. 501, C. A.); but "a company created by statute" means a company expressly incorporated by a special Act of Parliament (Re Smith, Davidson v. Myrtle, [1896] 2 Ch. 590). A limited company registered and having its head office in the United Kingdom, where its board of directors meets to manage and control its affairs is "a company in the United Kingdom," although the property of the company is situated abroad and its operations are carried on abroad (Re Hilton, Gibbes v. Hale-Hinton, [1909] 2 Ch. 548, per NEVILLE, J., at p. 551). A power to invest in the preference stock of certain companies does not authorise an investment in their fully-paid preference shares (Re Willis, Spencer v. Willis, [1911] 2 Ch. 563). "A municipal corporation" does not include incorporated harbour trustees (Hutton v. Annan, [1898] A. C. 289; see Wood v. Middleton (1898), 79 L. T. 155). As to the meaning of "public stocks of the Bank of England," see Re Hill, Fettes v. Hill, [1914] W. N. 132.

(a) Re Laing's Settlement, Laing v. Radcliffe, [1899] 1 Ch. 593. The trustee may lend the trust money to the beneficiary for life if there is a reasonable prospect of repayment by him (ibid.; but see note (p), p. 121, ante). Where under a marriage settlement trustees are empowered with the consent of the wife to lend the trust money to the husband, it has been held that her consent cannot be given retrospectively (Bateman v. Davis (1818), 3 Madd. 98), and that her consent is necessary to every loan made to him from time to time and cannot be given prospectively, but that, unless the terms of her consent only authorise a loan for a limited time, the money may remain on loan to him indefinitely (Child v. Child (1855), 20 Beav. 50).

from time to time by commissioners incorporated by Act of Parliament for the purpose of supplying water and having a compulsory power of levying rates over an area having, according to the returns of the last census prior to the date of investment, a population exceeding 50,000 (see Re Druitt, Druitt v. Dehler, [1903] 1 Ch. 446, C. Colonial stock registered in the United Kingdom in accordance with the provisions of the Colonial Stock Acts, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 59) and 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 35), as amended by the Colonial Stock Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict. c. 62), and with respect to which there have been observed such conditions, if any, as the Treasury may by order notified in the London Gazette prescribe (Colonial Stock Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict. c. 62), s. 2). The Treasury keeps a list of colonial stocks in respect of which the above-mentioned provisions are for the time being complied with, and publishes the list in the London and Edinburgh Gazettes and in such other manner as may give the public full information on the subject (ibid.). (iii.) Water stock issued by the Metropolitan Water Board (Metropolis Water Act, 1902 (2 Edw. 7 c. 41), s. 17 (4)). A trustee may from time to time vary any of these investments (Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 1). He may invest in them notwithstanding that they are redeemable and that the price exceeds the redemption value (ibid., s. 2 (1)), and may retain them until redemption (ibid., s. 2 (3)); except that he may not under his statutory power of investment purchase at a price exceeding its redemption value any stock mentioned or referred to under items (7), (9), (11), (12), (13) of clause (i.), supra, which is liable to be redeemed within fifteen years of the date of purchase at par or at some other fixed rate, or purchase any such stock as is mentioned or referred to under those items which is liable to be redeemed at par or at some other fixed rate at a price exceeding 15 per cent. above par or such other fixed rate (ibid., s. 2 (2)).

a speculative or insecure description (n) or of a wasting character (o). By statute (a) he may, unless expressly forbidden by the instrument creating the trust, invest (1) on mortgage of property held for an unexpired term of not less than two hundred years and not subject to a reservation of rent greater than 1s. a year, or to any right of redemption, or to any condition for re-entry, except for non-payment of rent (b); and (2) on any charge made under the Improvement of Land Act, 1864 (c), or on mortgage of any such charge (d).

A trustee investing on mortgage must reasonably satisfy himself that the mortgagor can give a good title to the property (e). He is not, however, chargeable with breach of trust only upon the ground that he has accepted a shorter title than that to which a purchaser is in the absence of a special contract entitled to require (f), if the title accepted is such as a person acting with prudence and caution would have accepted (g). Similarly, where he properly lends money on the security of leasehold property, he is not chargeable with breach of trust only upon the ground that in making the loan he dispensed either wholly or partly with the production or investigation of the lessor's title (h).

A trustee investing on a real security must not join in a contributory mortgage (i) and must not arrange with the mortgagor for the continuance of the loan for a term of years (j). The loan should be made under the advice of a surveyor or valuer whom the trustee reasonably believed to be an able, practical surveyor or valuer, and who was instructed and employed, independently of the owner of the property, to report as to its value and propriety as a

SECT. 1.
Duties of Trustees.

Trustees must not lend trust money to one of their number on mortgage (l).

If the mortgaged land becomes by foreclosure or otherwise discharged from the equity of redemption, the trustee holds it on trust for sale (m).

279. A power to a trustee to invest in the purchase of land does not authorise him to invest in the purchase of an equity of redemption (n), even though he is the authorised holder of a second mortgage on the property (o). Investment in purchase of land.

In exercising his power he must ascertain to the best of his ability

A trustee lending money on the security of property on which he can lawfully lend is not chargeable with breach of trust by reason only of the proportion borne by the amount of loan to the value of the property at the time when the loan was made, if it appears that the loan does not exceed two-thirds of the value of the property as stated in such a report as mentioned in the text, supra, and was made under the advice of the surveyor or valuer expressed in the report (Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 8 (1), (4); Re Walker, *Walker v. In making the investment he should take care that the income as well as the capital is properly secured (p).

SECT. 1.

Duties of Trustees.

Change of investments.

287. A trustee in the exercise of his power of investment may vary the investments from time to time (s), and may change a first-class security into another authorised investment yielding a better rate of interest (t). A trustee may do this, even at some risk to the capital of the trust estate, in order to provide the parent, who is the beneficiary for life, with a better income for the support and education of his children who are interested in remainder (a). Generally speaking, however, except so far as is expressly directed or authorised by the instrument creating the trust, a trustee must not invest with a view to the benefit of one beneficiary at the expense of another (b).

SECT. 2.—Powers and Discretions of Trustees.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

Exercise of express powers.

288. A trustee may exercise all such lawful powers as are expressly reposed in him by the instrument creating the trust (c), and may use such discretion with respect to the time and manner and extent of exercising them as is permitted by the terms of that instrument (d). He must, however, exercise the powers

Lewis*, [1902] 2 Ch. 667; see Re Brookes, Brookes v. Taylor, [1914] 1 Ch. 558. The court may, however, notwithstanding the opposition of the trustees, direct inquiries as to whether investments should be continued (Re D'Epinoix's Settlement, D'Epinoix v. Fettes, [1914] 1 Ch. 890).

Where there are two separate discretionary trusts for the benefit of the same beneficiary, each trust requires a separate and independent exercise of the discretion, and there reasonably and in good faith and for the purposes for which they were created (e).

289. Subject to any special provisions in the instrument creating the trust, a trustee may do acts which are reasonable and proper for realising the trust property (f) or for protecting it (g), and may make payments which are necessary for the due execution of the trust (h), and would be sanctioned by a court of equity if its sanction were applied for (i). As a rule, however, in any case of doubt, the trustee ought to obtain this sanction before so acting (k).

290. Where a power is discretionary and does not amount to an actual trust or obligation (l) the trustee will not be compelled to exercise it (m), even though its non-exercise will benefit one cestui que trust at the expense of another (n). Where the exercise of the power is obligatory, but the time and manner of its exercise are discretionary, the trustee will not be interfered with as regards those particulars (o).

is no right of contribution or common obligation between the two trusts (Smith v. Cock, [1911] A. C. 317, P. C.). ## SECT. 2.

SUB-SECT. 2.—*Particular Powers.Powers and Discretions of Trustees.

Power to give receipts.

Power to compound debts.

Adoption of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881.

291. The receipt in writing of a trustee for money, securities or other personal property or effects, payable, transferable, or deliverable to him under a trust or power, exonerates the person paying, transferring, or delivering the same from seeing to the application or being answerable for any loss or misapplication thereof (p).

292. If and so far as a contrary intention is not expressed in the instrument creating the trust, and subject to the terms of that instrument, two or more trustees acting together, or a sole acting trustee, where by the instrument, if any, creating the trust a sole trustee is authorised to execute the trusts and powers thereof, may, if and as he or they may think fit, accept any composition or any security, real or personal, for any debt or for any property, real or personal, claimed, and may allow any time for payment of any debt, and may compromise, compound, abandon, submit to arbitration, or otherwise settle any debt, account, claim or thing whatever relating to the trust; and, for any of those purposes, may enter into, give, execute, and do such agreements, instruments of composition or arrangement, releases and other things as may seem expedient, without being responsible for any loss occasioned by any act or thing so done by them or him in good faith (q).

293. As regards the powers given by the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (r), and the covenants, provisions, stipulations and words which under that Act are deemed to be included or implied in any instrument, or are by the Act made applicable to any contract for sale or other transaction, trustees and other persons in a fiduciary position, whether acting through or without a solicitor, are not guilty of neglect or breach of duty, and do not become in any way liable, by reason of the omission in good faith on the part of themselves or their solicitor to negative, in any such instrument or in connexion with any such contract or transaction, the giving, inclusion, implication or application of any of those powers, covenants, provisions, stipulations or words, or to insert or apply

(p) Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 20. An earlier statute provided that the bond fide payment to and receipt of a person to whom any purchase or mortgage money is payable upon an express or implied trust discharges the person making the payment from seeing to the application or being answerable for the misapplication of the money, unless the contrary is expressly declared by the instrument creating the trust or security (Law of Property Amendment Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 35), s. 23). Where there are several trustees they must all join in the receipt (Crewe v. Dicken (1798), 4 Ves. 97; Walker v. Symonds (1818), 3 Swan. 1, 63; Hall v. Franck (1849), 11 Beav. 519; *Webb v. any others in place thereof, in any case where the provisions of the Act would allow of their or his doing so (s).

294. Where the instrument creating the trust contains a trust for conversion, the trustee may from time to time agree with a beneficiary absolutely entitled to a share of the trust property for the appropriation of a specific portion thereof as his share (t); and it is his duty to appropriate where the instrument creating the trust declares separate trusts of the several shares (u). After the appropriation, neither portion of the trust property is liable to make good a subsequent depreciation in the other portion (a).

295. A trustee may take legal advice (b) and other expert advice (c).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Power to Employ Agents.

(i.) Powers under Statute.

296. A trustee may appoint a solicitor to be his agent to receive and give a discharge for money or valuable consideration or property receivable by the trustee under the trust by permitting the solicitor to have the custody of and to produce a deed containing such receipt as is referred to in the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (d), s. 56 (e); and a trustee is not chargeable with breach of trust by reason only of his having made or concurred in making any such

appointment (f); and the production of any such deed by the solicitor has the same validity and effect under that provision as if the person appointing the solicitor had not been a trustee (g).

A trustee may appoint a banker or solicitor to be his agent to receive and give a discharge for money payable to him under a policy of assurance, by permitting the banker or solicitor to have the custody of and produce the policy with a receipt signed by him; and a trustee is not chargeable with a breach of trust by reason only of his having made or concurred in making any such appointment (h).

In neither case, however, is the trustee exempted from any liability which he would have incurred if the Act had not been passed, in case he permits any such money, valuable consideration, or property to remain in the hands or under the control of the banker or solicitor for a period longer than is reasonably necessary to enable the banker or solicitor to pay or transfer it to him (i). These provisions do not authorise a trustee to do anything which he is expressly forbidden to do, or to omit anything which he is expressly directed to do, by the instrument creating the trust (j).

(ii.) Powers apart from Statute.

powers to

297. Independently of these statutory provisions and of any provisions in the instrument creating the trust (k), a trustee may allow a co-trustee, or employ an accountant, bailiff, banker, broker, solicitor, workman or other agent, to act for him in the affairs of the trust, and to receive and hold trust money and property where he is obliged to do so by common usage, and would if he were a prudent man of business do so in a similar affair of his own (l).

In every case the trustee must select the agent prudently and in good faith (a), and must employ him only so far as the matter properly lies within his professional capacity or his position as agent (b), and only so long as the matter requires (c).

A trustee cannot, however, divest himself of the trust by employing an agent, and cannot, therefore, entrust the agent with duties to any extent which the agent is willing to undertake, or pay to him any remuneration which he sees fit to demand (d).

Where there are several trustees, the banking account must be in the names of all, and they must not authorise the bank to pay cheques signed by one of their number (*Clough v. Moreover, where a trustee observes the above limitations, he is, as a general rule, chargeable only for money and securities actually received by him, notwithstanding his signing any receipt for the sake of conformity (k), and is accountable only for his own acts, receipts, neglects or defaults, and not for those of any other trustee, or for any banker, broker, or other person with whom any trust moneys or securities may be deposited (l).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Powers as to Real Estate and Chattels Real.

(i.) Leases.

301. Independently of, but subject to, any provisions in the instrument, if any, creating the trust, it is the duty of the trustee of a landed estate (b) to let the farms upon it from year to year in order to obtain sufficient rent and to keep the farms in a good state of cultivation (c). He may not grant a mining lease (d) or any lease of excessive length (e), or a lease at a premium or in reversion or containing unreasonable provisions (f). A person who holds property on trust cannot concur with the owner of adjoining property in letting the two properties together at one rent (g).

Duty to let and keep in cultivation.

(ii.) Insurance.

302. Where there is no express or implied direction on the subject in the instrument creating the trust, a trustee is not bound to insure buildings on the trust estate against loss or damage by fire (h); but subject to any express prohibition or direction in the instrument creating the trust, he may insure against loss or damage by fire (i) any building or other insurable property which he is not bound forthwith, upon being requested to do so, to convey absolutely to a beneficiary, to any amount, including the amount of any insurance already on foot, not exceeding three-fourths of the full value thereof, and may pay the premiums for such insurance out of the income thereof, or out of the income of any other property subject to the same trust, without obtaining the consent of any person entitled wholly or partly to such income (k).

(iii.) Repairs and Improvements.

Power to repair and improve.

303. The power of a trustee to repair and improve the trust property, and the question whether he is entitled to do so out of capital or income, depend on the terms of the instrument creating the trust (l).

Where the income of leasehold trust property is to be received by the trustee during the life of a beneficiary, he ought to keep the property in repair according to the covenants in the lease and retain sufficient income for the purpose (m).

Where the instrument expressly authorises a trustee to repair and generally to superintend the management of the trust estate (n), or to make such outlay for its improvement as he may think fit, or as may be conducive to its general benefit or to the benefit of the tenants thereof, he has wide powers of effecting repairs and improvements (o). In the absence of any such express authority,

But where a testator devised a house to trustees upon trust to permit his widow if she pleased to occupy it during her life, and after her death to sell it and divide the proceeds of sale among his children, it was held that the widow while she occupied the house was liable to pay the chief rent and rates and taxes, and to maintain it in such repair as a tenant would be bound to do in the absence of express contract; but that it was the duty of the trustees to keep it sufficiently insured against loss by fire (Kingham v. Kingham, [1897] 1 L. R. 170).

or except where in the case of leasehold property it is required by the covenants in the lease (p), the expenditure by a trustee of trust money on the repair (other than current necessary repair) or improvement of property held in trust for a beneficiary for life and remaindermen is only permissible where it comes within the provisions of the Settled Land Act, 1882 (q), and the amending Acts (r); or where it is in the nature of salvage of the property, or is otherwise evidently as much for the benefit of the remaindermen as of the beneficiary for life (s). In the last-mentioned case such expenditure must generally be defrayed out of the corpus of the property (t), except so far as in the case of leasehold property it is payable out of income (a). A power to keep the trust property in repair and make improvements does not authorise the pulling down of a dilapidated mansion house and the building of a new one (b); and a trustee is not justified in building a villa on the trust estate to improve its value (c), or in making unnecessary improvements or additions to buildings (d).

In the absence of any direction or power in the matter under the terms of the instrument creating the trust, the trustee should apply to the court; and the court will direct the execution of necessary or proper repairs (e) or improvements (f), and in that case may order the cost of them to be charged on or paid out of the capital or income of the property or to be apportioned between the capital and income as the equity of the case may require (g).

(iv.) Timber.

Powers and Discretions of Trustees.

Cutting timber.

304. A trustee may cut down timber on the trust property where it requires to be thinned or has arrived at maturity and would degenerate if left standing, and the court, if applied to, would authorise its being cut down (h).

(v.) Renewal of Leases.

Renewal of leases.

305. Subject to any express prohibition or direction in the instrument creating the trust, a trustee of leaseholds for lives or years which are renewable from time to time either under a covenant or contract, or by custom or usual practice, may, if he thinks fit, and must, if thereto required by any person having a beneficial interest, present or future or contingent, in the leaseholds, use his best endeavours to obtain from time to time a renewed lease thereof on the accustomed and reasonable terms. Where, however, by the terms of a settlement or will creating the trust the person in possession for his life or other limited interest is entitled to enjoy the leaseholds without any obligation to renew or to contribute to the expense of renewal, the above provision only applies subject to the consent in writing of that person being obtained to the renewal on the part of the trustee. For the purpose of obtaining a renewal a trustee may make or concur in making a surrender of the lease for the time being subsisting and do all other requisite acts (i). If money is required to pay for the renewal, the trustee may pay it out of any money in his hands in trust for the persons beneficially interested in the leaseholds to be comprised in the renewed lease; and if he has not in his hands sufficient money for the purpose, he may raise the required amount by mortgage of the leaseholds to be comprised in the renewed lease or of any other hereditaments for the time being subject to the uses or trusts to which those leaseholds are subject (k).

The enactment does not affect the relative liabilities of beneficiaries for life and in remainder as to the cost of the renewal; and the fines and expenses payable for it ought to be borne by the successive beneficiaries in proportion to their relative enjoyment of the estate as ascertained by an actuarial valuation (Re Baring, Jeune v. Baring, [1893] 1 Ch. 61). As to where renewal becomes impossible, see Morres v. Hodges (1860), 27 Beav. 625; Re Wood's Estate (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 572. advantage, and must not offer it for sale in a way calculated to depreciate its value or prejudice the sale (a). He ought to ascertain the estimated value of the property, and, unless he is bound to sell in all events, must not sell at an undervalue (b). If the trust or power is to arise on the death of a beneficiary for life, it cannot be exercised previously even with his concurrence (c). It may subsist, for the purposes of division, after all the beneficiaries have become entitled in possession (d). A trustee having a power or trust for sale cannot give to a lessee or other person an option of purchase for a definite sum at a future date, since, if the property increases in value in the meantime, the trust estate will lose the increment, while if it deteriorates the option will not be exercised (e).

By statute (f), if and so far as a contrary intention is not expressed in the instrument creating the trust or power, and subject to the provisions of that instrument, a trustee in whom a trust for sale or a power of sale is vested may sell or concur with any other person in selling all or any part of the property either subject to prior charges or not, and either together or in lots (g), and either by

SECT. 2.
Powers and Discretions of Trustees.

Apart from statute, the power of a trustee invested with a power of sale to concur with another person in the sale of trust property jointly with adjacent or other property, or in the sale of a share or interest subject to the trust jointly with the remaining shares or interest in the same property for one entire sum, depends on whether the trust property or share or interest can be so sold advantageously, and whether a proper apportionment of the purchase-money is possible (k). The purchaser is entitled to be satisfied that the sale is not disadvantageous to the trust estate and that the purchase-money has been apportioned (l); and in a proper case the apportionment, in default of agreement, will be made by the court (m).

Joint sale apart from statute.

309. On a sale by a trustee a purchaser cannot object to the title on the ground that a condition subject to which the sale was made was unnecessarily depreciatory (a). A beneficiary cannot impeach the sale on that ground unless it also appears that the consideration for the sale was thereby rendered inadequate (b), nor can he do so after the execution of the conveyance, unless it further appears that the purchaser was acting in collusion with the trustee at the time when the contract for the sale was made (c).

Sale subject to depreciatory condition.

310. A trustee may sell without excluding the application of the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874 (d), s. 2 (e); and may (f) adopt the provisions of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (g).

SECT. 2.

Powers and Discretions of Trustees.

Sale at request of tenant for life.

Sale at discretion of trustee.

311. The exercise by a trustee at the request of the tenant for life of a power of sale of settled land exercisable by him on that request will not be interfered with by a court of equity on the ground of an expected future increase in the value of the land (h).

312. Where there is a trust for sale at the request of beneficiaries for life, and after their death at the discretion of the trustee, the trustee can sell after the death of the beneficiaries for life without the concurrence of the persons beneficially entitled in remainder, notwithstanding that these persons are all of age and sui juris and have now an absolute and immediate interest in the property (i).

(ix.) Severance of Minerals.

Powers as to minerals.

313. Where a trustee or other person (k) is for the time being authorised to dispose of land by way of sale, exchange, partition, or enfranchisement, the High Court may sanction his so disposing of the land with an exception or reservation of any minerals, or with or without rights and powers of or incidental to the working, getting, or carrying away of the minerals, or his so disposing of the minerals with or without such rights or powers, separately from the residue of the land. After having obtained such sanction, he may from time to time, without any further application to the court, so dispose of any such land or minerals, unless he is forbidden to do so by the instrument creating the trust or direction (l).

SUB-SECT. 5.—Retainer against Beneficiaries.

Retainer as against beneficiaries.

314. Trustees may retain the capital or income of trust property as against a beneficiary entitled thereto who owes money to them as such trustees (m), and as against persons claiming through him (n).

In spite of the generality of the language, these enactments only apply to persons claiming to act under an instrument creating a trust or power, and are not applicable to an executor realising an estate for the benefit of creditors (Re Cavendish and Arnold's Contract, [1912] W. N. 83). Nothing in the Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 44, derogates from any power which a trustee may have under the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), and the amending Acts, or otherwise (Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 44 (3)). Palatine courts and county courts have the same power of sanction as the High Court in cases within their jurisdiction (ibid., s. 46); see title COUNTY COURTS, Vol. VIII., pp. 443 et seq.; COURTS, Vol. IX., pp. 120 et seq.

315. A beneficiary who is indebted to the trust estate (o), or has received from it more than his due share (p), or has rendered himself liable in respect of a breach of trust (q), can claim nothing from the trust estate until his liability to it is made good.

The trustees cannot, however, so retain money which comes into their hands as such trustees incidentally, and not as part of the trust property (a). A trustee of two funds under independent trusts for the same beneficiary cannot retain out of one of them in order to satisfy a claim which he has against the beneficiary in respect of the other fund (b).

SUB-SECT. 6.—Survivorship and Devolution of Powers.

316. In the case of trusts constituted, or created by instruments coming into operation before, the 1st January, 1882, a bare power given to two or more trustees in whom no estate is vested cannot be exercised by the survivor or survivors unless an intention to that effect is shown by the instrument creating the trust (c). It makes no difference that his interest in the trust estate is derivative (Jacobs v. Ryland, supra; Doering v. Doering, supra), and the principle applies in the case of the assign of a beneficiary who is also a trustee and has committed a breach of trust (Morris v. Livie (1842), 1 Y. & C. Ch. Cas. 380). But it does not apply where the breach of trust is committed in respect of another fund (Re Towndrow, Gratton v. Machen, supra); and circumstances may exempt incumbrancers of the beneficiary's share from the application of the principle (Re Eyton, Bartlett v. Charles, supra).

SECT. 2. vested may be exercised by the survivor (d), unless a contrary intention is indicated by the creator of the trust (e).

Powers and Discretions of Trustees. In the case of trusts constituted or created by instruments coming into operation after the 31st December, 1881, any power or trust given to two or more trustees may be exercised or performed by the survivor or survivors unless a contrary intention is expressed in the instrument creating the trust (f). The contrary intention must be clearly expressed, and is not indicated by the fact that a wide personal discretion is vested in the trustees (g).

Devolution.

317. Every new trustee appointed either under the statutory power (h) or by a court of competent jurisdiction has the same powers, authorities, and discretions as if he had originally been appointed trustee by the instrument, if any, creating the trust, unless a contrary intention is expressed in such instrument (i). New trustees appointed under a power in the trust instrument are often expressly invested with the powers of the original trustees. When this is not so, the principle applicable is that primâ facie powers given to trustees are incident to their office and pass to the holders of the office for the time being in the absence of a contrary intention expressed in clear language (k). Apart from statute, on the death of a sole or last surviving trustee the trusts and powers vested in him can only be executed by some person pointed out by the creator of the trust as a proper person for that purpose (l). Exercise of power where trustee is lunatic.

SUB-SECT. 8.—Restrictions on Exercise of Powers.

319. A trustee must not use the powers which the possession of the legal estate in the trust property confers on him in law except in a proper way for the legitimate purposes of the trust (t), and if he is about to do so he may be restrained by injunction (a). In exercising or refraining from the exercise of any power he must act honestly (b), and must not benefit one cestui que trust at the expense

If the trustee has only a limited estate of Trustees. or interest in the trust property he cannot exercise the power in such a manner as to prejudice the rights of a legal remainderman (e).

321. Where a trust is being administered by the court (g), the trustee may, with the sanction of the court (h), exercise discretionary powers with respect to it (i); but he cannot act without such sanction (k), and the court will in a proper case control the exercise of his discretion (l).

SUB-SECT. 9.—Disclaimer of Powers.

Disclaimer of powers.

322. A trustee or other person to whom a power is given, whether coupled with an interest or not, may, by deed, disclaim the power, and, after the disclaimer, is not capable of exercising or joining in the exercise of the power (m). After the disclaimer, the power may be exercised by the other or others, if any, of the persons to whom the power is given, or the survivor or survivors of those others, unless the contrary is expressed in the instrument creating the power (n). This power of disclaimer does not, however, enable a trustee to get rid of part of the trusts imposed on him (o).

323. Where a trustee has properly (p) paid or incurred expenses or liabilities in performing a trust, or in respect of the trust property, he is entitled to reimbursement or indemnity in respect thereof out of the trust property (q), or from a person sui juris who is beneficially entitled thereto (r). His right extends to calls on shares which he has been obliged to pay (s) and to liabilities incurred by him in properly carrying on a trade or business under the provisions of the instrument creating the trust (t), and to damages and costs recovered against him as legal owner of the trust estate, where the injury in respect of which they were recovered was not caused by his neglect or default (u). As between the beneficiaries, a trustee's costs and expenses are generally recoverable out of capital (a); and the trustee has a lien for them on both the capital and the income of the trust property in priority to the claims of beneficiaries and persons claiming under them (b). If, however, he has committed a breach of trust, he cannot recover them until he has made good the breach (c). Similarly, where the trustee has either mixed his own money with the trust fund (d) or expended his own money together with trust money in the purchase or improvement of property (e), the beneficiaries have a first claim in respect of the trust fund, and the trustee has only a subsequent claim in respect of his own money.

Costs incurred in reference to appointment.

324. A trustee is entitled to be reimbursed out of the trust estate the costs which he has incurred previously to his appointment in obtaining a statement of the trust property and ascertaining that he is being duly appointed (f) and the costs incidental to the appointment (g), and also the costs of former trustees paid by him to their personal representatives on obtaining a transfer of the trust property to himself (h).

Money expended in preserving trust
property.

325. A trustee has a right to a lien on the trust property and to an indemnity thereout for money expended by him in its preservation (i); and a person who at his request advances money for its preservation obtains a similar right by subrogation (k).

Parker* (1895), 72 L. T. 66, C. A. Where a trustee unnecessarily brought an action to have his trust administered by the court, alleging difficulties of construction and administration which were held by the court not to exist, the suit was dismissed with costs to be paid by the trustee personally (Re Cabburn, Gage v. Rutland (1882), 46 L. T. 848). Counsel's opinion does not always and necessarily justify a trustee in bringing or defending an action (Devey v. Thornton (1851), 9 Hare, 222, per TURNER, V.-C., at p. 232; Stott v. Milne (1884), 25 Ch. D. 710, C. A., per Lord SELBORNE, L.C., at p. 714; and see p. 121, ante). Where a trustee institutes or defends proceedings in order to have a point relating to his private interest decided at the expense of the trust estate, he will be ordered to pay the costs of them (Henley v. Phillips (1740), 2 Atk. 48; Irwin v. Rogers (1848), 12 I. Eq. R. 159). In proceedings in which trustees are merely neutral, they are liable, if they appear on an appeal by separate counsel, to be refused their costs (Carroll v. Graham, [1905] 1 Ch. 478, C. A.; Re Barry's Trusts, Barry v. Smart, [1906] 2 Ch. 358, C. A.; but see Catterson v. Clark (1906), 95 L. T. 42, C. A.). A trustee ought, in a proper case, to join with the cestui que trust in instituting proceedings if requested to do so, instead of being made a defendant thereto (Reade v. Sparkes (1827), 1 Mol. 8). Trustees who appeared in proceedings between beneficiaries without having been served were not allowed their costs (Bennett v. Biddles (1846), 10 Jur. 534).

(t) Thomas v. Walker (1854), 18 Beav. 521 (where a suit was instituted for the appointment of a new trustee instead of recourse being had to the statutory mode of procedure (see pp. 76 et seq., ante)); Wells v. Malbon (1862), 31 Beav. 48 (where a trustee instituted a suit instead of paying the trust fund into court (see pp. 175 et seq., post)); Re Cabburn, Gage v. Rutland, supra.

331. The costs of legal proceedings occasioned by the misconduct of a trustee are in the discretion of the court (a).

SECT. 3.
Rights of Trustees.

Misconduct of trustee.

Action for account or administration.

332. Where a cestui que trust brings an action against the trustee for an account or for the administration of the trust estate, the trustee bears his own costs if and so far as the proceedings have been occasioned by his neglect or default (b), and may be ordered to pay the costs of the cestui que trust (c). On the other hand, the trustee is allowed his costs out of the trust estate, or the cestui que trust's share of it, if his conduct has been honest and correct (d), even though it may have been mistaken (e); and the cestui que trust or his solicitor may be ordered to bear the costs of the proceedings personally, if they have been commenced wrongfully or too hastily (f). Where the action was necessary independently of a breach of trust committed by the trustee, he is liable to pay the special costs attributable to the breach of trust, but may be allowed his general costs of the action (g) after he has made good the loss occasioned by the breach (h).

333. Where there is more than one trustee, both or all ought to sue or defend jointly, and are only allowed one set of costs (i), except where a severance is necessary or proper owing to one of them being a beneficiary (k), or being attacked hostilely (l), or for some other good reason (m).

SECT. 3.
Rights of Trustees.

Remuneration
of solicitor-trustees and other professional
trustees.

336. The disability to receive remuneration exists even where the trustee acts as a solicitor or in some other professional capacity (g), or where he carries on or transacts a trade or business in connexion with and for the benefit of the trust (h); and it extends to the firm of the professional trustee and to his partners individually (i), that he will not act unless the cestui que trust will give him a remuneration not contemplated by the terms of the trust, and the cestui que trust contracts that he shall have it, the transaction may be upheld (Ayliffe v. Murray (1740), 2 Atk. 58). But a bargain of this kind ought to be discouraged; and the remuneration was disallowed where the trustee died before he had completely performed the trust (Gould v. Fleetwood (1732), 3 P. Wms. 251, note (A)). A trustee who has accepted the office without any stipulation on the subject cannot afterwards refuse to continue to act unless he is remunerated, even though, by performing his duties, he has greatly benefited the cestui que trust (Bainbrigge v. Blair (1845), 8 Beav. 588, 596; Barrett v. Hartley (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 789, per STUART, V.-C., at p. 796).

Accles, Ltd.*, [1902] W. N. 164. The fact that the trustee has benefited the trust property to the prejudice of his own affairs cannot be taken into consideration (Robinson v. Pett, supra). He cannot charge or take a commission or other remuneration for performing any duty in connexion with the trust unless he is specially authorised to do so by the instrument creating the trust (Arnold v. Garner (1847), 2 Ph. 231, C. A., per Lord COTTENHAM, L.C., at p. 235; Nicholson v. Tutin (No. 2) (1857), 3 K. & J. 159); as to a trustee who is an auctioneer, see *Matthison v. As to the right of a constructive trustee to remuneration in some cases, see p. 165, post. A director of a company who holds his qualification shares as trustee for another company is not accountable to that company for his director's fees (Re Dover Coalfield Extension, Ltd., [1908] 1 Ch. 65, C. A.). As to where a person who acted as salesman for a firm at a salary was appointed trustee of a share in the firm, see Re Lewis, Lewis v. Lewis (1910), 103 L. T. 495.

unless the trustee arranges that the partner employed shall alone be entitled to the remuneration (k). The rule also extends to executors and to trustees of implied trusts (l). It does not, however, apply to the costs of a solicitor-trustee acting in legal proceedings for himself and his co-trustees jointly, or for himself and his cestui que trust (m), or where he acts separately for a person to whom trust money is lent on mortgage (n), or as between him and a stranger who unsuccessfully brings an adverse action against the trust (o).

Express
declaration as to remuneration.

337. The creator of a trust may, however, expressly declare that a trustee who is a solicitor or acts in some other professional character shall receive his usual professional remuneration for so acting (a). Such a declaration in a will amounts to a legacy to the trustee; it is, therefore, void if he is an attesting witness to the will (b), and does not take effect if the testator's estate is insolvent (c), though it operates notwithstanding the bequest of a legacy to the trustee conditionally upon his accepting the trust (d). The declaration does not authorise charges for services not strictly professional (e) unless expressly so worded (f).

Amount of remuneration.

338. The trustees, unless specially authorised to do so, cannot bind the beneficiaries as to the amount of the remuneration to be paid to a solicitor-trustee, or to an independent solicitor (g), and a forming part of the trust estate, the firm is not accountable to the trust estate for fees received by him for manorial business and brought into the partnership accounts, since they were received by him as steward and not as a solicitor (*Re Corsellis, Lawton v. SECT. 3.

Rights of Trustees.

339. A constructive trustee may be entitled to an allowance or remuneration in respect of the time and trouble expended by him on property of which he is rightfully in possession, but of which he is in equity a constructive trustee (i).

Constructive
trustee.

SUB-SECT. 5.—Protection of the Court.

340. Where a trustee is in doubt as to his right course of action, he is entitled to take the opinion of the court (k); and, generally, a trustee is entitled to the reasonable protection and direction of a court of equity in the exercise of his trust (l). If, however, he obstinately, capriciously, or unreasonably refuses to act without that protection, he will be ordered to pay the costs of the proceedings for obtaining it (m). The decision of a court of first instance completely protects and indemnifies him in respect of what he does in accordance with it (n). If he appeals from it to a higher tribunal, he does so at his own risk (o); and, if he fails, he will be ordered to pay the costs of the appeal (p).

SUB-SECT. 1.—Gifts to Trustees.

341. As a trustee is not entitled to remuneration for his services (q), so a gift to him from a cestui que trust is liable to be set aside (r), especially if it is made out of or with respect to the capital or income of the trust property (s). Such a gift may, however, stand if the trustee can prove that he has placed himself in exactly the same position as a stranger would have been in, and that he has taken no advantage of his influence or knowledge, or of his relation to the cestui que trust, beyond what may be the natural and unavoidable consequence of kindness arising out of that relation, and that he has put the cestui que trust on his guard, and has brought everything to the knowledge of the cestui que trust which he himself knew (t).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Bargains with Beneficiaries.

Bargains.

342. A bargain or arrangement between a trustee and a cestui que trust with reference to the trust property, by which the interest of the cestui que trust therein is in any way prejudiced, is liable to be set aside, unless it can be shown that the cestui que trust, in concurring in it, was fully aware of all the circumstances of the case, and had not been subjected to any pressure or undue influence (a).

(q) See pp. 162 et seq., ante.

(r) Hylton v. Hylton (1754), 2 Ves. Sen. 547; Billage v. Southee (1852), 9 Hare, 534, per TURNER, V.-C., at p. 540. It is almost impossible that, where the relation of trustee and cestui que trust exists, a transaction purporting to be a bounty for the execution of antecedent duty can stand, however moral and creditable the action may be (Hatch v. Hatch (1804), 9 Ves. 292, per Lord ELDON, L.C., at pp. 296, 297). A cestui que trust cannot give a benefit to a trustee (Vaughton v. Noble (1861), 30 Beav. 34, per ROMILLY, M.R., at p. 39; and see title FRAUDULENT AND VOIDABLE CONVEYANCES, Vol. XV., pp. 109, 110). A gift from a cestui que trust to a trustee, even where the parties are in the relation of wife and husband, can only be supported by very strong and clear evidence (Re Blake, Blake v. Power (1889), 37 W. R. 441, per KAY, J., at p. 442).

(t) Hunter v. Atkins (1834), 3 My. & K. 113, C. A., per Lord BROUGHAM, L.C., at p. 135. No one standing in a fiduciary relation to a person can retain a gift made to him by that person if the donor impeaches the gift within a reasonable time, unless the donee can prove that the donor had independent advice, or that the fiduciary relation had ceased for so long that the donor was under no control or influence whatever (Powell v. Powell, [1900] 1 Ch. 243, per FARWELL, J., at p. 245).

Forwood*, [1901] 1 Ch. 746, C. A., per VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., at pp. 760, 761. The transaction, in order to be impeachable, must be connected with the trust (Knight v. Marjoribanks (1849), 2 Mac. & G. 10, C. A.), and the rule does not extend to dealings between a mortgagee and mortgagor (ibid.). A dealing of a trustee with a cestui que trust may be upheld if it is fair in all respects and no advantage has been taken of the cestui que trust, and it is clear that he knew his rights and that the facts were correctly represented to him (Luther v. Bianconi (1860), 10 I. Ch. R. 194, per BRADY, L.C., at p. 200).

Where, however, the terms of the trust authorise the raising of money on the security of trust property, one of several trustees may lend money on a mortgage thereof by the trustees, and may exercise the powers of a mortgagee over it adversely to the trust (b).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Purchases by Trustees.

343. Except under an express authority contained in the instrument creating the trust or under an order of a court of competent jurisdiction (c), a person who is invested with a trust or power to sell property cannot purchase it from himself, since he cannot at the same time occupy the two positions of vendor and purchaser (d); and one of several such persons cannot purchase it from the others (e). If such a person desires to purchase such property he must first be discharged from his trusteeship (f); and even then, in order that the transaction may be unimpeachable, it must be clear that, in purchasing it, he is not taking an advantage of knowledge which he has acquired in respect of it during his trusteeship (g). Nor can he sell the property to himself jointly with others, or to a trustee for himself (h), or to another person with a view to its resale to himself (i), though if the sale is in all respects bonâ fide he may sell to the trustees of his marriage settlement (k) or to a joint stock company in which he is a shareholder (l). independent person under the trust for sale, he cannot repurchase it for himself, so long as the contract for sale to that person remains executory, and he has power either to enforce it or to rescind or alter it (m). A subsequent repurchase by the trustee after a bonâ fide sale to a third party and the lapse of a considerable period will not, however, be set aside on the ground that when he sold the property he hoped to repurchase it for himself at some future time (n). Moreover, subject to the same principles as regulate purchases by other trustees from their cestui que trust (o), he may purchase the beneficial interest of a cestui que trust in property which he holds on trust for sale (p), and may purchase the property itself where the cestui que trust has assumed the conduct of the sale and arranges for the purchase (q), or where the cestui que trust urges the purchase on the trustee (r) or agrees to it (s).

no absolute rule against his purchasing the trust property from his cestui que trust (b), and if he purchases the whole of it the relation between them is terminated (c). Such a transaction is always regarded by courts of equity with the utmost jealousy (d), and in order that it may stand, if it is impeached within a reasonable time by the cestui que trust or a person claiming through him (e), the trustee must show (1) that there has been no fraud or concealment his active duties in respect of the property and has become a bare trustee (see p. 86, ante) in relation to it (Ex parte Bennett (1805), 10 Ves. 381); but it does not extend to a trustee who has had no active duties in connexion with the property, such as a trustee to preserve contingent remainders (Pooley v. Quilter (1858), 4 Drew. 184, per KINDERSLEY, V.-C., at p. 189), or a person who was named as a trustee but who disclaimed or never acted (Stacey v. Elph (1833), 1 My. & K. 195; *Mackintosh v. (c) Gibson v. Jeyes, supra, at pp. 271, 277; Morse v. Royal, supra, per Lord ERSKINE, L.C., at p. 373. In purchases by a trustee from his cestui que trust an act is done which, though open to inquiry, puts an end in form to the relation between them. If the purchase stands, he is no longer a trustee, since the cestui que trust has permitted him to become the beneficial owner (Chalmer v. Bradley (1819), 1 Jac. & W. 51, per PLUMER, M.R., at p. 68).

(d) Morse v. Royal, supra, at p. 372; Watson v. Toone (1820), Madd. & G. 153. The mischiefs of a purchase by a trustee from his cestui que trust are great (Chalmer v. Bradley, supra, at p. 68). The same principle applies to constructive trustees or trustees de son tort (Plowright v. Lambert, supra), and to solicitors and agents and other persons in a fiduciary position to the vendor (Gibson v. Jeyes, supra; Holman v. Loynes (1854), 4 De G. M. & G. 270, C. A.; Spencer v. Topham (1856), 22 Beav. 573; Johnson v. Fesemeyer (1858), 3 De G. & J. 13; Tate v. Williamson (1866), 2 Ch. App. 55; Cockburn v. Edwards (1881), 18 Ch. D. 449, C. A., per JESSEL, M.R., at p. 455; Luddy's Trustee v. Peard (1886), 33 Ch. D. 500; Barron v. Willis, [1900] 2 Ch. 121, C. A.), including counsel in relation to their clients (Carter v. Palmer (1842), 8 Cl. & Fin. 657, H. L.); but purchases by them will be upheld if the vendor is separately advised and fully cognisant of the circumstances (Edwards v. Meyrick (1842), 2 Hare, 60, 68 et seq.; Holman v. Loynes, supra, at pp. 281 et seq.; Barnard v. Hunter (1856), 5 W. R. 92). The principle does not apply to purchases by a mortgagee from a mortgagor (Knight v. Marjoribanks, supra), or by a partner from the representatives of a deceased partner (Chambers v. Howell (1847), 11 Beav. 6; Knox v. Gye (1872), L. R. 5 H. L. 656, per Lord WESTBURY, at p. 675).

(e) Campbell v. Walker, supra, at p. 680; Randall v. Errington (1805), 10 Ves. 423, per GRANT, M.R., at p. 427. Lapse of time does not begin to prejudice the cestui que trust on the ground of laches or acquiescence, until he has knowledge that the trustee has become the purchaser of the property (Randall v. Errington, supra, at p. 427).

or advantage taken by him of information acquired by him in the character of trustee (f); (2) that the cestui que trust had independent advice (g), and every kind of protection (h), and the fullest information with respect to the property (i); and (3) that the consideration was adequate (k).

346. A purchase by a trustee is set aside against a subsequent purchaser from him with notice (l). A purchase by a trustee is not set aside by a court of equity, however, if there has been delay or acquiescence on the part of the cestui que trust or subsequent dealings by him on the footing of its having taken place (m). Where it is set aside at the instance of the cestui que trust, the property will be ordered to be reconveyed to him in consideration of the payment by him of the price at which the trustee bought, with interest thereon at 4 per cent.; while, on the other hand, the trustee, or any purchaser from the trustee with notice, accounts for the rents and profits since the purchase by the trustee, but without interest thereon, or, if he has been in actual possession, is charged with an occupation rent (n). The trustee will be entitled, in addition to his purchase-money, to an allowance with interest for improvements and repairs made by him which are substantial and lasting (o), or tend to enhance the price of the property on a resale (p); and, on the other hand, if he has done anything to deteriorate its value, the amount of the deterioration will be deducted from what he receives (q).

The cestui que trust may, in the alternative, require the property to be resold (r). In this case it is put up at a sum representing the price at which the trustee purchased it(s), together with the value of any repairs and improvements made by him (t), and if a higher sum is offered it is sold for that figure; but, if not, the trustee is held to his purchase (u).

If, before the transaction is impeached, the trustee has resold the property to a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice (a), the cestui que trust may require the trustee to account for the difference in the price, with interest at 4 per cent. to be separately made parties (h); and the court or a judge may at any stage of the proceedings order any of the cestuis que trust to be made parties either in addition to or in lieu of the previously existing parties (i).

349. Where a trustee brings an action to enforce his legal right as against a third party, a defence which is valid against him generally bars the equitable right of his cestui que trust (k).

350. If one of several trustees refuses to join as plaintiff in a proper action or has a special interest which precludes him from doing so, he should be made a co-defendant (l). If no trustee is willing to institute a proper action, the cestui que trust must Proceedings do not abate on a change of trustees, and a trustee may be made a party in lieu of an absolute owner to whose interest he has succeeded (R. S. C., Ord. 17, rr. 1, 3). A person claiming adversely to a trust should not be made a party to a suit for its execution (A.-G. v. Avon, otherwise Aberavon Corporation (1863), 3 De G. J. & Sm. 637, C. A.). As between the trustee and the third parties, the costs of litigation are not affected by the existence of the trust, but follow the ordinary rules (Brodie v. St. Paul (1791), 1 Ves. 326; Edward v. Harvey (1810), Coop. G. 40). Trustees suing on behalf of their cestuis que trust are not required to give security for costs, as nominal plaintiffs, in case of their poverty (White v. Butt, [1909] 1 K. B. 50, C. A.). In certain cases cestuis que trust, though unnecessary, may not be improper parties (Merry v. Pownall, [1898] 1 Ch. 306, per KEKEWICH, J., at p. 312). Where cestuis que trust ought not to have been parties to an action, their costs are not allowed (Re Cooper, Cooper v. Vesey (1882), 20 Ch. D. 611, C. A.). As to the duty of trustees in reference to instituting and defending actions and their power to compromise, see pp. 118, 140, ante; as to interpleader by or against trustees, see title INTERPLEADER, Vol. XVII., pp. 587, 591, 595, 596, 136, 614.

Where a person by fraud obtains a deed whereby another covenants to pay him an annual sum of money in trust for a third party, the fraud is a defence to an action on the covenant, although the cestui que trust is not shown to have been privy to it (Evans v. Edmonds, supra). But a defence which would be good against an action by a cestui que trust is not necessarily available against an action by his trustees (Britten v. Perrott (1834), 2 Cr. & M. 597; May v. Taylor (1843), 6 Man. & G. 261; Re Hayward, Tweedie v. Hayward, [1901] 1 Ch. 221), unless the cestui que trust is absolutely entitled to the whole of the trust property (May v. Taylor, supra, at pp. 264, 265). As to set-off, see p. 159, ante.

ordinarily take proceedings for the administration of the trust by the court and obtain an order for liberty to use the trustee's name, or for a receiver who will use the trustee's name, in the institution of a proper action (m). In special circumstances, however, a cestui que trust may himself institute the action (n), adding as defendants every trustee (o) and every other cestui que trust (p), unless the trustees will allow their names to be used as plaintiffs on receiving a proper indemnity (q).

where, owing to the cestuis que trust not being sui juris, or for any other reason, he cannot otherwise get an effectual discharge for it (l).

359. If a trustee lodges in court a trust fund where the persons entitled to it can be clearly ascertained, he may be refused his costs in connexion therewith and may be ordered to pay the costs of proceedings for obtaining payment of the fund out of court (m). When a difficulty can be conveniently dealt with by an application to the court on summons, that course should be taken (n).

360. If the fund to be lodged in court is, or represents, a legacy or residue of a deceased person's estate to which an infant or person beyond the seas is absolutely entitled and on which the trustee has paid the legacy duty or on which no duty is chargeable, the trustee may make the lodgment, without an affidavit, on production of the

for payment
into court.

Ch. 350, C. A. Payment into court is justified where a beneficiary has incumbered his interest in the trust property and there is a question as to the amount due to the incumbrancer (Hockey v. Western, supra). The fact of the person entitled being a married woman does not of itself justify payment of the fund into court (Re Waring (1852), 16 Jur. 652; Re Roberts's Trusts (1869), 38 L. J. (CH.) 708; but see Re Swan (1864), 2 Hem. & M. 34). Where there was a doubt whether money held in trust for a married woman had been agreed to be settled, the trustee was held to be justified in paying it into court instead of paying it to her and her husband (Re Bendyshe (1857), 3 Jur. (N. S.) 727).

The mere threat of an action or an unfounded claim made on a trust fund does not justify its being paid into court (Re Waring, supra; Re Maclean's Trusts (1874), L. R. 19 Eq. 274, per JESSEL, M.R., at p. 282). A trustee cannot pay money into court merely to get rid of the liability of a trust which he has undertaken to perform (Re Knight's Trusts, supra, per ROMILLY, M.R., at p. 49; Re Elliot's Trusts (1873), L. R. 15 Eq. 194), or because he cannot get a release from trustees who are entitled to receive it from him (Re Cater's Trusts (No. 2) (1858), 25 Beav. 366), or a release from the persons beneficially interested when there are executors who have a legal right to receive the money (Re Hoskin's Trusts (1877), 5 Ch. D. 229), or because, being an executor, he cannot get a release and indemnity, but only a receipt (Re Roberts's Trusts, supra; Re Fortune's Trusts, Ex parte Brennan (1870), 4 I. R. Eq. 351).

In all other cases the trustee must make and file an affidavit stating briefly (1) the trust and the instrument creating it; (2) to the best of his belief, the names and addresses of the persons interested in the fund (3); his submission to answer inquiries respecting its application; and (4) his address for service of any proceeding in relation thereto; and he must also give notice of the lodgment to the persons named in his affidavit as interested therein (p).

Payment out of court.

361. Payment out of court is obtained on petition or summons by a person who proves his title to the fund (q). The petition or summons is served on such persons as the court or judge directs (r), including in most cases the trustee who lodged the fund in court, and whose duty it is to appear and protect the fund (s). The trustee is not, however, served where the lodgment is made without an affidavit (t), and he need not be served where in his affidavit he has stated that a named person, then an infant, was absolutely entitled to the fund (u), or where the portion of the fund sought to be paid out has been carried to the separate account of a named person (a). Where a fund has been lodged in court to the credit of infants as the next of kin of a person then supposed to have died

A person entitled to a definite share in the fund may apply, independently of the other beneficiaries, for payment out of that share (Re Befford's Will (1853), 21 L. T. (O. An applicant may be allowed his costs, although his claim fails (Re Birch's Legacy under Bissell's Will (1856), 2 K. & J. 369; compare Ex parte Stevens (1848), 2 Ph. 772, per Lord COTTENHAM, L.C., at p. 774). The fund will be distributed on the application of the trustee (Re Cooper's Legacy Trusts, Ex parte Sparks (1853), 4 De G. M. & G. 757, C. A.; Re Trower's Trust (1859), 1 L. Where, under the terms of the trust, trustees had a discretion as to the mode of applying the capital and income of the trust fund for the benefit of the cestui que trust, it was held that payment of the fund into court put an end to their discretion, but that the court could deal with the fund in the way that it considered best in his interest; and on his application the fund was ordered to be paid out to the trustees of a proper settlement executed by him (Re Murphy's Trusts, [1900] 1 I. Any trustee or cestui que trust has a right to seek or require the intervention of the court (i); but he may be refused his costs, or may be condemned to pay the costs of the proceedings, if he does so vexatiously or needlessly, or if he vexatiously or needlessly renders their institution necessary (k). The creator of the trust may, by appropriate

372. Any act by a trustee in reference to the trust property in contravention of the duties imposed on him by the trust (s), or in excess of those duties (t), and any neglect or omission on his part to fulfil those duties (a), and the concurrence or acquiescence by one of several trustees in a similar act, neglect, or omission on the part of a co-trustee (b), constitutes a breach of trust (c); and if

A trustee who at the request of one beneficiary neglects to sell the trust property when it can be sold advantageously, and afterwards sells it at a reduced price, is liable to make good the loss to the trust estate (Taylor v. Tabrum, supra; Fry v. Fry (1859), 27 Beav. 144; compare Re Evans, Jones v. Evans, [1913] 1 Ch. 23, 33).

(c) Adair v. Shaw, supra, at p. 272. It is a breach of trust, notwithstanding that the trust was voluntarily created by the trustee himself without any valuable consideration (Drosier v. Brereton (1851), 15 Beav. 221, 225, 226), and notwithstanding that the trustee derives no personal advantage from it (Adair v. Shaw, supra, at p. 272; Montford (Lord) v. Cadogan (Lord), supra, at p. 489). The fact of the trustee being remunerated for his services does not generally increase his liability (Jobson v. Palmer, [1893] 1 Ch. 71, per ROMER, J., at p. 76), but may in some circumstances do so (National Trustees Co. of Australasia v. General Finance Co. of Australasia, [1905] A. C. 373, 381, P. C.). As to breaches of trust in case of public and charitable trusts, see title CHARITIES, Vol. IV., pp. 271, 272, 276, 277, 330; as to breaches of official trust under the Official Secrets Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, s. 28), see titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., p. 32; CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., pp. 480, 481.

such breach of trust entails a loss on the trust estate, the trustee, and, after his decease or bankruptcy, the trustee's estate, are, as a general rule, liable (d). A trustee may, however, be relieved from such liability by the provisions of the instrument creating the trust (e) or by statute (f), or by the fact that the breach of trust has been occasioned by necessity or some other adequate cause (g), or has been authorised or condoned by the cestui que trust injured thereby (h), or has been due to an innocent mistake (i). A mere error of judgment does not in itself constitute a breach of trust (k); and a trustee is presumed to have dealt honestly and properly with the trust estate until the contrary is shown (l).

373. Liability for a breach of trust extends to a tenant for life in respect of matters as to which he is by the Settled Land Act, 1882 (m), placed in the position of a trustee (n), and to a constructive trustee and trustee de son tort (o), and to a trustee who retires

SECT. 1. with a view to or with knowledge of an intended breach of Liability of trust (p).
Trustees.

Married woman.

374. The respective liabilities of husband and wife for a breach of trust committed by the wife depend on the general law as to wrongs committed by a married woman (q). Where a husband is liable for his wife's breaches of trust, the liability extends to the case of a negative breach of trust by negligence as well as to a breach of trust by active misconduct (r).

Bare trustee.

375. Where a bare legal estate in property is vested in a person in trust for an equitable trustee who is interested in it upon trust for beneficiaries, if the bare trustee so deals with the legal estate as to sanction an act done by the equitable trustee to the prejudice of the beneficiaries, he thereby becomes a party to the breach of trust and is answerable accordingly (s). Where the equitable trust is for the purpose of sale, the bare trustee is, in the interests of the beneficiaries, bound to convey it to the equitable trustee to enable him to execute his trust. If, however, in parting with it he goes beyond the mere purpose of conveying it to the equitable trustee and so deals with it as to facilitate a breach of trust by the equitable trustee, he is deemed a party to the breach of trust and is responsible for it (t).

Nature of liability.

376. A breach of trust in itself is merely a violation of an equitable obligation; the remedy for it, therefore, lies in equity only and must be sought in a court of equitable jurisdiction (a). A breach of trust is, in equity, regarded as giving rise to a simple contract debt (b), unless the trustee has covenanted under his seal (c) that he will perform the trust, in which case his breach of trust, being also a breach of covenant, gives rise to a specialty debt (d). Such a covenant may be created by an instrument under his seal (e) containing an express agreement that he will perform the trust (f), or a declaration to that effect (g), or may be raised by necessary implication from such an instrument (h). The mere fact of his accepting the trust by a deed under his seal does not, however, constitute a covenant by him to carry the trust into effect (i).

which constructive trustees or trustees de son tort (m) as well as the duly appointed trustees are liable, the joint and several liability extends to the whole number (n). A suit to obtain relief or redress in respect of a breach of trust can therefore be instituted against some only of the persons who are liable for it (o) and without making all who are liable for it parties to the suit (p).

380. Where a trustee is liable in respect of distinct breaches of trust, one of which has resulted in a loss and the other in a gain, he is not entitled to set off the gain against the loss, but is liable for the whole loss occasioned by the one breach, while the estate is entitled to the whole gain realised by the other (r).

Where the solicitors of the trustees have as constructive trustees been parties to a breach of trust committed by the trustees, the solicitors may be joined as defendants in an action against the trustees in respect of the breach, and are jointly and severally liable for it with the trustees (ibid.). A whole firm of solicitors may be held liable for the concurrence of one of their number in a breach of trust (Blyth v. Fladgate, Morgan v. Blyth, Smith v. Blyth, [1891] 1 Ch. 337; but see Palmer v. S. (1907), 51 Sol. Jo. 653); see title SOLICITORS, Vol. XXVI., p. 760. (ii.) Criminal Liability.

381. A trustee of any property, who with intent to defraud converts or appropriates or disposes of or destroys any part of it, is guilty of a misdemeanour and punishable with penal servitude or imprisonment(s). No prosecution for the offence may be commenced without the sanction of the Attorney-General(t); and no person who has taken civil proceedings against the trustee may prosecute him without the sanction of the court or judge before whom such proceedings were taken or are pending(a); nor may the trustee be prosecuted after having compulsorily disclosed the offence on oath in legal proceedings bonâ fide instituted by a party aggrieved or on an examination in bankruptcy(b). The criminal liability of the trustee, and any proceedings, conviction, or judgment in respect of it, do not affect the right of any party aggrieved to his remedy at law or in equity nor in any way prejudice an agreement entered into or security given by the trustee with a view to the restoration or repayment of the trust property(c).

382. A trustee who is ordered by the High Court to pay a sum of money in his possession or under his control, and who makes default in doing so, is liable to attachment and imprisonment(d).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Extent of Liability.(i.) Restoration of Trust Property.

383. The extent of the liability incurred by a trustee who is responsible for a breach of trust is measured by the extent of the loss or depreciation which his act or omission has caused to the trust estate; and he is liable to restore to the estate the property which it has thereby lost or its value, and to make good any depreciation and damage which the estate has thereby suffered(e).

Liability of Trustees.

Criminal liability for breach of trust.

SECT. 1.

Liability of Trustees.

Improper investment.

Neglect to invest.

384. Where a trustee improperly sells out stock and invests in land, he must replace the stock, and if the land realises more than is required for doing so the excess belongs to the trust estate (f). A trustee, however, is never charged with imaginary values (g), and where there is no loss there is no liability (h). If, therefore, he improperly invests trust money on an insufficient security which is realised at a loss and the proceeds are invested in stock, which is subsequently sold at a profit, he is entitled to the benefit of the profit towards discharge of his liability (i).

Where a trustee is directed to invest trust money in a particular stock or security and neglects to do so, he may at the option of the cestui que trust be charged either with the principal sum which he has retained uninvested and interest thereon (k), or with the amount of the stock or security which could have been purchased when he ought to have made the investment, and the dividends which would have accrued thereon (l). This option does not exist where the Carruthers* (1912), 133 L. T. Jo. 589. The liability is not limited to what the trustee who is charged has actually received, and still less to any benefit which he may have personally derived from the breach (Adair v. Shaw (1803), 1 Sch. & Lef. 243, per Lord REDESDALE, L.C., at p. 272). Where a trustee mixes trust moneys with his own he is charged with the whole amount except what he can prove to be his own (Lupton v. White, White v. Lupton (1808), 15 Ves. 432; Cook v. Addison (1869), L. R. 7 Eq. 466, per STUART, V.-C., at p. 470; Re Oatway, Hertslet v. Oatway, [1903] 2 Ch. 356; and see pp. 208, 209, post). Where a trustee incautiously invests trust money on a security authorised by the terms of the trust but of insufficient value, he is liable for the deficiency on a realisation of the security (Re Salmon, Priest v. Uppleby (1889), 42 Ch. D. 351, C. A.). The court does not assent to any compromise which does not replace the whole of the trust money, where the trustee is able to pay it (Re Dewar, Dewar v. Brooke (1885), 54 L. J. (CH.) 830, per KAY, J., at p. 833).

The fact that a higher interest than would have been produced by authorised investments has been paid to a beneficiary for life from an unauthorised investment of trust money does not render the trustee liable to recoup the difference to the capital of the trust estate where he restores the principal sum in full (Stroud v. Gwyer (1860), 28 Beav. 130; Re Appleby, Walker v. Lever, Walker v. Nisbet, [1903] 1 Ch. 565, C. A.; Slade v. Chaine, [1908] 1 Ch. 522, C. A.; Re Hoyles, Row v. Jagg (No. 2), [1912] 1 Ch. 67).

(i) Fletcher v. Green (1864), 33 Beav. 426; see Winchelsea (Earl) v. Norcliffe (1687), 1 Vern. 434. Where a trust estate, consisting in part of new shares in a company liable to calls and allotted in respect of original shares forming part of the estate, was lost through default of the trustee, he was held liable to make good the value of the estate less the amount of the calls on the new shares which had in fact been paid by him (Briggs v. Massey (1882), 51 L. J. (CH.) 447, C. A.).

SECT. 1.
Liability of Trustees.

385. Where a loss is sustained through a breach of trust on the part of a trustee in neglecting to realise a security, he is charged with the full amount of the loss unless he can show that this amount would not have been produced if he had realised the security when he ought to have done so (n).

Neglect to (ii.) Payment of Interest.

386. A trustee, besides being required to account for principal trust money, is also charged with interest on it in the following cases, namely:—(1) where he can be proved to have received interest; (2) where the presumption of his having received interest is so strong that he is estopped from alleging the contrary; (3) where the court is entitled to decide that he ought to have received interest; and (4) where in breach of his duty he (i.) retains trust money in his own hands uninvested (o), or (ii.) mixes it with his own money or property (p), or (iii.) employs it in trade or speculation (q), or (iv.) applies it in an unauthorised manner (r), or (v.) pays it to the wrong person (s), or (vi.) fails to produce or account for it when lawfully demanded by the cestui que trust or ordered by the court (t).

Rate of interest.

388. Where a trustee simply retains uninvested trust money which he ought to have invested, or there are no other special circumstances in the case, he is charged with simple interest at the rate of 4 per cent. (b). He is charged at the rate of 5 per cent., if he has removed the amount from a proper investment in which it was producing 5 per cent. (c) or otherwise commits a direct breach of trust (d); and compound interest is charged where by reason of a trust for accumulation or otherwise it was his duty to have invested the trust fund at compound interest (e), or where he employs it in trade or speculation for his own benefit (f), or is otherwise guilty of a gross breach of trust (g).

(iii.) Accounting for Profits.

The burden of proving honesty and reasonableness lies upon the trustee (Re Stuart, Smith v. Stuart, supra, at p. 590).

(s) National Trustees Co. of Australasia v. General Finance Co. of Australasia, [1905] A. C. 373, 380, 381, P. C. Each case depends on its own circumstances (Re Turner, Barker v. Ivimey, supra, per BYRNE, J., at p. 542; Re Kay, Mosley v. Kay, supra, per ROMER, J., at p. 524). A trustee is not necessarily excused by the breach having occurred through the fraud of his solicitor (Davis v. Hutchings, [1907] 1 Ch. 356; but see *Re Smith, Smith v. Thompson, Smith v. not be sufficient to constitute reasonable conduct (x). In the case of an investment on mortgage the requirements of the Trustee Act, 1893 (y), constitute a standard of reasonable conduct, though non-compliance with them is not necessarily unreasonable (a).

398. By statute (b), where a trustee improperly advances trust money on a mortgage security which would at the time of the investment be a proper investment in all respects for a smaller sum than is actually advanced thereon (c), the security is deemed an authorised investment for the smaller sum, and the trustee is only liable to make good the sum advanced in excess thereof with interest (d).

Collis*, [1905] 2 Ch. 24, C. A., per ROMER, L.J., at pp. 32 et seq.). Assent to a breach of trust may be given by a beneficiary entitled in reversion (Life Association of Scotland v. Siddal, Cooper v. Greene (1861), 3 De G. F. & J. 58, per TURNER, L.J., at p. 73), but a person who subsequently becomes a beneficiary is not bound by his previous acquiescence in it (Re Clarke, Ex parte Smith (1841), 2 Mont. D. & De G. 113). The concurrence of the beneficiary in the breach need not be expressed in writing (MacLeod v. Annesley (1853), 16 Beav. 600, 607; Fletcher v. Collis, [1905] 2 Ch. 24, 33, C. A.). But the principle that the cestui que trust cannot complain of a breach of trust to which he was a party does not preclude a corporation from seeking

A married woman beneficially entitled for her separate use may lose the right to relief in respect of a breach of trust by acquiescence (Jones v. Higgins (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 538), but where she is restrained from anticipation she cannot consent to a breach of trust which will deprive her of future income (Dickson v. Hook (1866), 14 W. R. 552). Crichton*, [1896] 1 Ch. 870, C.A., per LINDLEY, L.J., at p. 875. In the case of a man of full age there may be a prima facie presumption that he is acting with a full knowledge of all the circumstances (Sawyer v. Sawyer (1885), 28 Ch. D. 595, C.A., per FRY, L.J., at p. 604). A person who actively concurs in the division of a trust fund in ignorance that he has himself an interest in it and that the division is a breach of trust cannot afterwards make the trustee liable for the amount of his interest in it (Evans v. Benyon (1887), 37 Ch. D. 329, C.A., per COTTON, L.J., at p. 344; compare Re Horne, Wilson v. Cox Sinclair, [1905] 1 Ch. 76).

beneficiaries or other persons entitled to enforce the liability (m), provided that they are of full age (n) and under no incapacity (o), and are not acting under undue influence (p), and have full information as to all material circumstances connected with the breach of trust (q). Where all do not join in the release, those who join are precluded from enforcing the liability (r). A release of one of several trustees may operate to release the others also (s).

Condonation
by conduct.

401. The relief of a trustee from liability by the conduct of the beneficiary is governed by the same principles as relief by actual release (t). A beneficiary who, knowing of a breach of trust, obtains from the trustee part only of the trust property to which he is entitled, does not thereby, in the absence of evident intention, lose his right to a further claim against the trustee in respect of the rest of the property (a).

any person claiming through him, all rights and privileges conferred by any Statute of Limitations are enjoyed in the like manner and to the like extent as if he had not been a trustee or person claiming through a trustee (d), except where the claim (1) is founded upon fraud or fraudulent breach of trust to which the trustee was party or privy (e), or (2) is to recover trust property or the proceeds of trust property still retained by the trustee (f), or previously received by him and converted to his own use (g). If the proceeding is instituted to recover money or other property, and is one to which no existing Statute of Limitations applies, the trustee, except in the cases above mentioned, is entitled to the benefit of, and may plead, lapse of time in the like manner and to the like extent as if the claim had been against him in an action of debt for money had and received (h). Under any Statute of Limitations time runs against a married woman entitled in possession for her separate use, whether with or without a restraint on anticipation, but does not begin to run against a beneficiary unless and until his interest is an interest in possession (i).

derives any greater or other benefit from a judgment or order obtained in a proceeding by another beneficiary than he could have obtained if he had himself brought such proceeding and this provision had been pleaded (Trustee Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 59), s. 8 (2)). This provision does not deprive an executor or administrator of any right or defence to which he is entitled under any existing Statute of Limitations (ibid., s. 8 (3)). Where land or rent is vested in a trustee on an express trust, the right of the cestui que trust or any person claiming through him to bring an action against the trustee or any person claiming through him to recover such land or rent is deemed to have first accrued within the meaning of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), at and not before the time at which such land or rent is conveyed to a purchaser for valuable consideration, and is then deemed to have accrued only as against such person and any person claiming through him (ibid., s. 25); see also title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX., pp. 68, 69, 139 et seq., 161 et seq.

It is, however, doubtful whether an executor merely as such comes within the enactment (Lacons v. Warmoll, [1907] 2 K. B. 350, C. A., per Lord ALVERSTONE, C.J., at p. 362). Directors of a company committing a breach of trust can claim the benefit of the enactment (Re Lands Allotment Co., [1894] 1 Ch. 616, C. A.; Whitwam v. Watkin (1898), 78 L. T. 188; Re National Bank of Wales, Ltd., [1899] 2 Ch. 629, 663, C. A.). ## SECT. 2.

Limitations on Liability of Trustees.

Relief independently
of statute.

403. In cases to which the special statutory protection does not extend, a claim by a cestui que trust against his trustee for property held on an express trust, or in respect of a breach of an express trust, is not barred by any Statute of Limitations (j), except in the case of money charged on land (k). On the other hand, in the case of a constructive trust, proceedings to enforce liability for a breach of trust may be barred by mere lapse of time (l).

Proceedings against a trustee for breach of trust may, however, be barred, even in the case of an express trust, by the laches of the beneficiary, where such laches amounts to acquiescence or has caused the trustee to alter his position to his detriment (m).

SUB-SECT. 5.—Indemnity from Beneficiaries.

Impounding of interest.

The interest must be in the actual trust estate of which the trustee seeking to impound it is trustee (Ricketts v. Ricketts, supra). The rule applies where the beneficiary is one of the trustees (Chillingworth v. Chambers, [1896] 1 Ch. 685, C. A.). The beneficiary's interest may be impounded as against a person to whom it has been assigned subsequently to the breach of trust (*Bolton v. has the same rights against them as the beneficiary had to whom he has made good the loss (f).

Where one of the trustees is also a beneficiary, he must bear the loss and indemnify his co-trustees to the full extent of his share in the trust estate, and can only claim contribution from them in respect of the amount, if any, by which the loss exceeds the value of his share (g).

Where one of the trustees obtains a personal benefit from a breach of trust in which the others took no active part, he must bear the loss to the extent of the benefit which he has obtained, and must indemnify his co-trustees to that extent (h).

406. In special circumstances (i) one of several trustees who has been alone actively concerned in committing a breach of trust may be deprived of the right to contribution from his co-trustees, and may be ordered to pay the whole amount of the loss and indemnify them in respect of it, and of all costs in relation thereto (k), and, where no actual loss has been sustained by the trust estate, to indemnify them against the costs of proceedings occasioned by the breach of trust (l). Independently of any action by the beneficiaries, one of several trustees who commits a breach of trust may be required by the others to make it good (m).

SECT. 3.—Liability of Other Persons.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

As to third party notices, see title PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE, Vol. XXIII., pp. 162 et seq.

(i) Bahin v. Hughes, supra, at pp. 395, 396. The case may arise where the defaulting trustee is solicitor to the trust estate and is entrusted with the management of it (Lockhart v. Gould, [1898] 2 Ch. 250).

receives trust property and deals with it in a manner inconsistent with the trust (o), or where in acting for the trustee he commits a wrong for which he is liable to the trustee (p). On the other hand, he is not liable for a breach of trust when he has no notice of the trust (a) or of the intended trust (b), or when he merely acts as agent for a trustee (c).

SECT. 3
Liability of Other Persons.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Liability of Beneficiaries.

408. Where one of several beneficiaries procures trust money to be improperly laid out or to be paid away under a fraudulent appointment by him, or otherwise himself commits a breach of the terms of the trust, and part of the trust estate is consequently lost, the other beneficiaries are entitled as against him to have their shares made good out of his share of what is ultimately recovered (d), or out of any benefit which he has himself derived from the breach of trust (e). A beneficiary who induces a trustee to commit a breach of trust is primarily liable for it, and will be ordered to recoup to the trustee the amount which the trustee has been required to make good to the trust estate (f).

409. Where a beneficiary receives from the trustee more than he is entitled to, whether in respect of capital or income, he is liable to refund to the trust estate the excess which ought not to have been paid to him (g). The court in administering the estate will cause the amount wrongly paid to him in respect of one interest to be deducted from any other shares in the estate to which he is entitled (h).

SUB-SECT. 3.—*Liability of Agents and Third Parties.*Liability as constructive
trustee.

410. Where an agent or a third party by his conduct or the circumstances of the case has become a constructive or implied trustee or a trustee de son tort (i), he incurs for a breach of trust a liability similar to that of an express trustee (k).

SECT. 4.—*Other Remedies.*SUB-SECT. 1.—*Prevention.*Refusal of specific performance.

411. The court never lends its assistance to the commission of a breach of trust (l), and, therefore, does not decree specific performance of a contract which involves a breach of trust (m).

Injunction.

412. Where the court is satisfied that trustees are contemplating a breach of trust, it restrains the commission thereof by injunction (n).

Part V.—Judicial Trustees.

SECT. 1.—Appointment and Discontinuance.

418. Under the Judicial Trustees Act, 1896 (h), the court having jurisdiction in the matter (i) may in its discretion, on an application by or on behalf of a creator or intending creator of a trust (k), or a trustee (l) or beneficiary (m), appoint a person (n) as judicial trustee

Appointment.

(h) 59 & 60 Vict. c. 35.

(i) The jurisdiction is exercisable by the Chancery Division of the High Court, either in London or in a district registry, and, as respects trusts within its jurisdiction, by a palatine court (see title COURTS, Vol. IX., pp. 120 et seq.); and as respects trusts in which the trust property does not exceed in value £500, by the metropolitan county courts mentioned in the Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), Sched. III., or a county court having at the time bankruptcy jurisdiction (Judicial Trustees Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 35), s. 2; Judicial Trustee Rules (Stat. R. & O. Rev., Vol. XII., Supreme Court, England, p. 911), 1897, rr. 2, 29, 30, 31). As to the jurisdiction of county courts, see title COUNTY COURTS, Vol. VIII., pp. 660, 661.

(k) The Act does not extend to a charity (Judicial Trustees Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 35), s. 6 (2)); but the administration of the property of a deceased testator or intestate is a trust within the Act (ibid., s. 1 (2); Judicial Trustee Rules, 1897, r. 25).

(l) Including an executor or administrator (Judicial Trustees Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 35), s. 1 (2); Re Ratcliff, [1898] 2 Ch. 352, per KEKEWICH, J., at pp. 355, 356 (where it was said that the Act authorised the removal of an executor)).

(m) The application may be made in a pending cause or matter or by originating summons (Judicial Trustee Rules, 1897, rr. 2—4).

(n) Any fit person nominated in the application may be appointed, including a beneficiary or relative, or solicitor, or a married woman, or an existing trustee (Judicial Trustees Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 35), s. 1 (3); Judicial Trustee Rules, 1897, r. 5). If no one is nominated or the court is not satisfied as to the fitness of the person nominated, the court may appoint any fit person otherwise suggested (Douglas v. Bolam, [1900] 2 Ch. 749, C. A.), or the official solicitor of the court; and, where the proceedings are taken in a district registry, or a palatine court, or a county court, some other official of the court may be appointed (Judicial Trustees Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 35), ss. 1 (3), 5; Judicial Trustee Rules, 1897, rr. 7, 29 (3), 30 (2), 31 (3)). Where an official of the court is appointed judicial to be a trustee of the trust either jointly with any other person or as sole trustee, and, for sufficient cause, in place of all or any existing trustees (o). On his appointment the trust property is to be vested in him either solely or jointly with other trustees as the case requires (p).

Discharge.

419. Where a judicial trustee desires to be discharged, he must give notice to the court, and state what arrangement it is proposed to make with regard to the appointment of a successor; and an official of the court will be appointed in his place if no other fit person is available for the office (q).

Suspension or removal.

420. A judicial trustee may be suspended or removed on the application of a person interested in the trust, or, if the court thinks fit, without any application (r).

Cesser of judicial trustee.

421. The court may, on the application of any of the persons interested in the trust, and must, if they all so desire, order that there shall cease to be a judicial trustee of the trust, whether the person who is judicial trustee continues as a trustee of the trust or not (s).

SECT. 2.—Security.

Security.

422. A judicial trustee, if not an official of the court, must, before his appointment can take effect, give security for the due application of the trust property by recognisance, bond, or otherwise as the trustee, funds can be held by him under his official title (Judicial Trustee Additional Rule, 1899 (Stat. R. & O. Rev., Vol. XII., Supreme Court, England, p. 922)); and all remuneration, allowances and payments for his services as such are paid and applied and the trust property is dealt with as the Treasury direct (Judicial Trustee Rules, 1897, r. 18; Judicial Trustee Rule, April, 1900 (Stat. R. & O. Rev., Vol. XII., Supreme Court, England, p. 923)). Where an official of the court who is judicial trustee of a trust dies or ceases to hold office, his successor, in the absence of direction to the contrary, becomes judicial trustee, and the trust property becomes vested in him (Judicial Trustee Rules, 1897, r. 7 (4)). An official of the court is not to be appointed judicial trustee for members or debenture-holders of, or persons being in any other relation to, a company, whether incorporated or unincorporated, or a club, and if the trust involves carrying on a trade or business, that circumstance is to be taken into account in reference to whether or under what special conditions he should be appointed (ibid., r. 26). As to appointing the Public Trustee a judicial trustee, see p. 213, post.

(o) Judicial Trustees Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 35), ss. 1. 4. The appointment is in the discretion of the court, and will not be made where there is good reason to the contrary (Re Chisholm, Legal Reversionary Society v. Knight (1898), 43 Sol. Jo. 43; Re Ratcliff, [1898] 2 Ch. 352 (where the application was refused and an ordinary trustee was appointed); Re Martin, [1900] W. SECT. 3.—Administration and Accounts of the Trust.

423. Except where the court considers it unnecessary, a judicial trustee must, as soon as practicable after his appointment, furnish the court with a complete statement of the trust property containing an approximate estimate of the income and capital value of each item, and must from time to time give to the court all information necessary for keeping the statement correct (b).

Statement
property.

424. Where there is a judicial trustee, a separate account of the trust must be kept in the names of the trustees at a bank approved by the court, and the judicial trustee must forthwith pay to that account all trust money coming to his hands; and all the trust documents of title must be deposited with that bank, or in such other custody as the court directs, in the names of the trustees; and the judicial trustee must deposit a list of such documents with the court (c).

account at a bank.

Deposit of trust documents.

425. Fees are prescribed to cover the expenses of the administration of the Act, and, when paid by a judicial trustee, may be deducted out of the income of the trust property, unless the court otherwise directs (d).

Fees.

426. A judicial trustee may at any time request the court to give him directions as to the trust or its administration, and the court may at any time give him such directions without any request on his part (e).

Directions by the court.

427. The court may at any time order an inquiry into the administration of a trust by a judicial trustee, or into any dealing or transaction of a judicial trustee (f).

Inquiry by the court.

(t) Judicial Trustee Rules, 1897, r. 9. Where an administrator who has given an administration bond is appointed a judicial trustee, he need not give security as such unless so directed by the court (ibid., r. 25 (2)). The amount is ordinarily six-fifths of the estimated income of the trust property (ibid., r. 9 (4)). A premium payable by a judicial trustee to a guarantee company on account of his security may be directed by the court to be paid out of the trust property (ibid., r. 9 (9)).

(b) Ibid., r. 8.

(c) Ibid., rr. 10, 11. Where an official of the court is judicial trustee, the court may direct that, instead of such separate account, all receipts may be dealt with and all payments made and accounts thereof kept, in such manner as the Treasury directs (ibid., r. 10 (8)).

SECT. 3.

Administration and Accounts of the Trust.Audit of accounts.

428. Where there is a judicial trustee the accounts of the trust are audited once a year (g) and, together with a note of any corrections made upon the audit, are filed as the court directs (h). Unless the court otherwise directs, the judicial trustee is allowed on the audit deductions on account of his remuneration and allowances and fees paid by him, but not on account of the expenses of professional assistance or his own work or personal outlay, unless authorised by the court or justified by the strict necessity of the case (i).

SECT. 4.—*Remuneration.*Amount of remuneration.

429. A judicial trustee may receive out of the trust property such remuneration as is in each case fixed by the court, which, unless the court for special reasons otherwise orders, covers all his work and personal outlay (k). The court may, if it thinks fit, make to him out of the trust property special allowances of a limited amount for the statement of the trust property prepared by him on his appointment, and for realising and investing or reinvesting trust property, and for extraordinary trouble caused by special circumstances (l).

Forfeiture of
remuneration.

Where a judicial trustee fails to comply with the Act or the rules or with any direction of the court or of an officer of the court thereunder, or otherwise misconducts himself in relation to the trust, the court may, after he has had the opportunity of being heard, order that the whole or any part of his remuneration be forfeited (m).

Part VI.—The Public Trustee.

SECT. 1.—*Appointment, Status, and Officers.*Appointment and officers.

430. The Public Trustee is an officer who is appointed by the Lord Chancellor under the Public Trustee Act, 1906 (n). He (g) Judicial Trustees Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 35), s. 1 (6). The court fixes the date to which the accounts are to be made up in each year, and the time after that date within which the accounts are to be delivered to it for audit (Judicial Trustee Rules, 1897, r. 14 (1)). The accounts are ordinarily audited by the officer of the court; but if they are likely to involve questions of difficulty, they may be referred to a professional accountant for report at such remuneration as the court fixes (ibid., r. 14 (2)).

(h) Ibid., r. 15 (1). The judicial trustee is to send a copy or summary of the accounts to such beneficiaries or other persons as the court thinks proper; and the court may allow the filed accounts to be inspected on reasonable notice by persons connected with the trust (ibid., r. 15 (2), (3)).

(m) Ibid., r. 19.

(n) 6 Edw. 7, c. 55. The objects of the Act are carried into effect by rules made by the Lord Chancellor with the concurrence of the Treasury (Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 14). Legal proceedings under the Act are taken in the High Court; but in cases within the jurisdiction of a palatine court, that court has concurrent powers (ibid., ss. 10, 12, 13 (7)).

holds office during pleasure, receiving such salary or fees (o) and being appointed on such terms as the Treasury determines (p). The Lord Chancellor appoints such officers of the Public Trustee as, subject to the sanction of the Treasury, he considers necessary for the purposes of the Act, and they hold office upon such terms and are remunerated at such rates and in such manner as the Treasury sanctions (q). A person appointed Public Trustee or an officer of the Public Trustee may, and, if the Treasury so requires, must, be a person already in the public service (r). The Central Office of the Public Trustee is in London (s).

SECT. 1.
Appointment,
Status, and Officers.

431. The Public Trustee is a corporation sole with perpetual succession and a common seal, and can sue and be sued by that name (t), and can hold land (u). Scope of office.

The Public Trustee may be appointed to be a judicial trustee (w), or to be administrator of the property of a convict under the Forfeiture Act, 1870 (a). He cannot, however, accept a trust exclusively for religious or charitable purposes (b); or a trust which involves the management or carrying on of a business, except to the extent to which he is authorised to do so by rules made under the Act (c); or a trust under a deed of arrangement for the benefit of creditors; or the administration of an estate known or believed by him to be insolvent (d).

SECT. 2.—Ordinary Trusteeship.

432. The Public Trustee may be appointed, either originally or as a new or additional trustee, to be trustee of a will or settlement or other instrument creating a trust, or to perform a trust or duty belonging to a class which he is authorised by rules made under the Act to accept, in like manner in all respects as if he were a private trustee, except that he may be appointed sole trustee, Acting as trustee of instrument of trust.

(s) Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 8 (4); Public Trustee Rules, 1912, r. 3. The Lord Chancellor may, by notice in the London Gazette, from time to time prescribe the establishment of branch offices and notify the appointment at such offices of officers of the Public Trustee (see the text, supra) by the name of deputy public trustees, who have the powers and perform the duties assigned to them under the rules (Public Trustee Rules, 1912, rr. 3 (2), 4). As from the 1st April, 1914, a branch office has been established at Manchester.

He may also be appointed under the Settled Land Act, 1882 (g), to be sole trustee of a settlement (h).

Retirement of co-trustee.

433. Where the Public Trustee has been appointed a trustee, a co-trustee may retire from the trust under the Trustee Act, 1893 (i), s. 11, without the consents thereby required, and notwithstanding that there are not more than two trustees (k).

Subject to the Act and the rules he may accept as ordinary trustee any trust created by a trust instrument or arising upon an intestacy, except the trusts of an instrument made solely by way of security for money (Public Trustee Rules, 1912, rr. 6—8). Where the will, settlement, or other instrument creating the trust or duty contains a direction to the contrary, he cannot be appointed unless the court having jurisdiction in the matter (see note (n), p. 212, ante) so orders (Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 5 (3)). He may decline a trust absolutely or accept on conditions, but not on the ground only of small value (ibid., s. 2 (3)). In the case of his appointment by a testator his subsequent consent, and in every other case his previous consent, to act is requisite (Public Trustee Rules, 1912, rr. 8—10; Re Shaw, Public Trustee v. Little, [1914] W. N. 141, C. A.). Notice of his proposed appointment as a new or additional trustee must, so far as practicable, be given to the beneficiaries under the trust, or to their guardians where they are infants (Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 5 (4); Public Trustee Rules, 1912, rr. 40 (2), (3), 41); and the court may, upon application by any of them, within twenty-one days after receipt of the notice, prohibit the appointment if the interests of all the beneficiaries appear so to require (Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 5 (4); Re Hope Johnstone's Settlement Trusts (1909), 25 T. SECT. 3.—Custodian Trusteeship.

435. Where the Public Trustee is appointed custodian trustee of a trust (n), the trust property is to be transferred to him as if he were sole trustee (o); but the management of the trust property and the exercise of all powers and discretions under the trust remain vested in the other trustees as managing trustees (p). As between himself and the other trustees, he has the custody of all the trust securities and documents of title, but they have free access thereto and are entitled to take copies and extracts (q).

In determining the number of trustees for the purposes of the Trustee Act, 1893 (r), the custodian trustee is not reckoned as a trustee (s).

The power of appointing new trustees, when exercisable by the trustees, is exercisable by the managing trustees alone; but the custodian trustee has the same power as any other trustee of applying to the court for the appointment of a new trustee (t).

(m) Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 6 (2). Subject to the provisions of the Act, the order of the court sanctioning the transfer confers on the Public Trustee all the powers of the transferring executor or administrator; and the transferring executor or administrator is not liable in respect of any act or default in reference to the estate subsequent to the date of the order, other than an act or default of himself or of some person for whose conduct he is in law responsible (Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7 c. 55), s. 6 (2)).

(n) As to his appointment in that capacity, see p. 86, ante.

(o) Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 4 (2) (a). Vesting orders for the purpose may, where necessary, be made under the Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53); see pp. 103 et seq., ante. All sums payable to or out of the income or capital of the trust property are payable to or by the custodian trustee; but he may allow the income arising from the trust property to be paid to the other trustees, or to such person or the banking account of such person, as they direct; and in that case he is exonerated from seeing to its application or being answerable for its loss or misapplication (Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 4 (2) (e)).

(p) Ibid., s. 4 (2) (b). The custodian trustee is to concur in and perform all acts necessary to enable the managing trustees to exercise their powers of management or any other power or discretion vested in them (including power to pay money or securities into court), unless the matter is a breach of trust or involves personal liability on him in respect of calls or otherwise. Where he does not so concur, he is not liable for any act or default on the part of any of the managing trustees (ibid., s. 4 (2) (d)). If he acts in good faith, he is not liable for accepting as correct, and acting upon the faith of, a written statement by the managing trustees as to a birth, death, marriage, or other matter of pedigree or relationship, or of fact, upon which the title to any of the trust property depends, or for acting upon legal advice obtained by the managing trustees independently of him (ibid., s. 4 (2) (h)).

(q) Ibid., s. 4 (2) (c). Other custodian trustees have the same powers (ibid., s. 4 (3)).

SECT. 3.
Custodian
Trusteeship.

Determination of custodian
trusteeship.

436. On the application of either the custodian trustee or any managing trustee or beneficiary, and on proof that the termination of the custodian trusteeship is generally desired by the beneficiaries or is on other grounds expedient, the court may make an order for the purpose, and make such vesting orders and give such directions as appear necessary or expedient (a).

SECT. 4.—Administration of Small Estates.

Administration of small estates.

437. Where an application to the Public Trustee to administer an estate (b) is made by a person who in the opinion of the Public Trustee would be entitled to apply to the court for an order for its administration by the court, and the Public Trustee is satisfied that the gross capital value thereof is less than £1,000 (c), and that the persons beneficially entitled thereto are persons of small means, he must administer the estate unless he sees good reason to the contrary (d).

Effect of undertaking
administration.

438. On the Public Trustee undertaking, by a declaration under his hand and seal, to administer an estate the trust property other than stock and the right to transfer or call for the transfer of stock forming part of the estate vest in him in like manner as if vesting orders for the purpose had been made by the High Court under the Trustee Act, 1893 (e); and that Act applies accordingly (f). As from such vesting, any trustee entitled under the trust to administer the estate is discharged from all liability attaching to the administration, except in respect of past acts (g).

Opinion of the court.

439. The Public Trustee can, without judicial proceedings, take the opinion of the High Court upon any question arising in the course of an administration (h).

(a) Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 4 (2) (i).

(b) That is to say, the estate of a deceased person (Re Devereux, Toovey v. Public Trustee, [1911] 2 Ch. 545, per EVE, J., at p. 548).

(c) That is to say, at the time when the application is made, although the original value was greater (ibid.).

(d) Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 3 (1); Public Trustee Rules, 1912, rr. 12—16. For the purposes of the administration he has (subject to the rules) all the administrative powers and authorities exercisable by a master of the Supreme Court acting in the administration of an estate (Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 3 (3); Public Trustee Rules, 1912, r. 14). A refusal by the Public Trustee to administer the estate does not prevent him from exercising with respect to the estate any other powers exercisable by him under the Act or the rules which he may be duly appointed to exercise (Public Trustee Rules, 1912, r. 13 (3)).

(e) 56 & 57 Vict. c. 53; see pp. 103 et seq., ante.

(f) Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 3 (2). The Public Trustee cannot himself transfer stock without the leave of the court (ibid.). Copyhold land forming part of the estate does not vest in him, but he has in respect of it the like powers, and the Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 34 (2), applies in like manner, as if he had been appointed by the court under ibid., s. 33, to convey the land (Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 3 (2)). Deposits in the Post Office Savings Bank standing in the names of deceased depositors whose estates are being administered by the Public Trustee are transferred into his name (Post Office Savings Bank (Public Trustee) Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 52), s. 1 (1)).

(g) Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 3 (2).

(h) Ibid., s. 3 (4); Public Trustee Rules, 1912, r. 15.

440. Where proceedings have been instituted in any court for the administration of an estate, and by reason of its small value the court considers that it can be more economically administered by the Public Trustee, or that for any other reason it should be administered by him, the court may order that it be administered by him, in like manner, subject to any special directions by the court, as if he had undertaken it upon an application to him for the purpose (i).

tration of Small Estates.

Order for administration by Public
Trustee.

SECT. 5.—Investigation of Trust Accounts.

441. A trustee or beneficiary of a trust may apply to the Public Trustee for an investigation and audit of the condition and accounts of the trust (k). Notice is given, where the applicant is a beneficiary, to every trustee, and where the applicant is a trustee, to each co-trustee and to the person entitled to the income of the trust property; and the applicant and the trustees may within three months after receipt of the notice agree on a solicitor or public accountant to act as auditor in the investigation and audit. If they fail to agree, the Public Trustee or some person appointed by him is to act as auditor (l).

Application for investigation and audit of accounts.

442. An auditor may be removed by an order of the court; and if an auditor is removed, or resigns, or dies, or becomes bankrupt or incapable of acting before the investigation and audit is completed, a new auditor may be appointed in his place in like manner as the original auditor (m).

Removal of auditor and appointment
of new auditor.

443. On the completion of the investigation and audit, the auditor forwards to the applicant and to every trustee a copy of the accounts, together with a report thereon and a certificate signed by him to the effect that the accounts exhibit a true view of the trust, and that he has seen and verified the trust securities, or, if such is the case, that the accounts are deficient in the respects specified in the certificate (n).

Report and certificate of auditor.

444. The amount of the auditor's remuneration and other expenses of the investigation and audit is fixed by agreement between the trustees, the person entitled to the income of the trust property, and the auditor, or, in default of agreement, by the Public Trustee, who, in fixing it, has regard to the estimated value of the audit.

(i) Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 3 (5).

(k) Ibid., s. 13.

(l) Ibid.; Public Trustee Rules, 1912, rr. 31—37. The investigation and audit take place unless the High Court, or, in cases within its jurisdiction, a county court, otherwise orders (Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), ss. 13 (1), (7), 15; and see title COUNTY COURTS, Vol. VIII., pp. 679, 680). A trustee or beneficiary cannot be appointed auditor (Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 13 (1)). The auditor has full powers of inspecting documents and requiring information (ibid., s. 13 (2), (6), (7); Re Williams (James), deceased (1910), 26 T. L. R. 604).

(m) Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 13 (4).

(n) Ibid., s. 13 (2). A beneficiary is entitled to inspect and take copies of the accounts, report and certificate, and, at his own expense, to be furnished with copies thereof or extracts therefrom (ibid., s. 13 (3)). Wilfully making a statement false in any material particular in any statement of accounts, report or certificate, is punishable by fine or imprisonment or both (ibid., s. 13 (8)).

Investigation of Trust
Accounts.

trust property, the time occupied or likely to be occupied by the investigation and audit, and other circumstances. Unless he otherwise directs, the amount is borne by the estate; but he may order it to be borne by the applicant or by the trustees personally, or partly by them and partly by the applicant (o).

SECT. 6.—Conduct of Business.

Register
and accounts.

445. A register is kept at the Central Office in London of a trust in which the Public Trustee is acting as trustee or custodian trustee, and of all estates in course of administration by him, whether from the Central Office or from any branch office (p). Separate accounts of capital and income are kept for every trust or estate (q), and the capital and income is dealt with, and the accounts are audited, in the manner prescribed by rules made under the Act (r).

No notice of trust.

446. A company cannot object to enter the Public Trustee on its books on account only of his being a corporation, and the entry does not constitute notice of a trust (s). In dealings with property the fact that the person or one of the persons dealt with is the Public Trustee does not of itself constitute notice of a trust (t).

Employment of solicitors and other
agents.

447. The Public Trustee is empowered to employ solicitors, bankers, accountants, brokers and other persons, having regard in each case to the interests of the trust, and, where practicable, to the express or implied wishes of the creator of the trust and the other trustees, if any, and the beneficiaries (a).

Appeal.

448. Persons aggrieved by any act or omission or decision of the Public Trustee may appeal to a judge of the Chancery Division of the High Court in chambers or, in cases within its jurisdiction, to a county court (b).

SECT. 7.—Discharge of Liabilities.

No bond or security.

449. The Public Trustee upon the grant to him of administration, or upon his appointment to act in any capacity, is not required to give any bond or security which would be required from a private person, but is subject to the same liabilities and duties as if he had given the bond or security (c).

(o) Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 13 (5); Public Trustee Rules, 1912, rr. 35—37. The costs of wholly unnecessary applications may be directed to be paid by the applicant (Re Utley, Russell v. Cubitt, [1912] W. N. 147). A person ordered to pay the costs can appeal from the order (Re Oddy, [1911] 1 Ch. 532).

(p) Public Trustee Rules, 1912, r. 16. Regulations are made for the inspection and taking of copies of entries in the register (ibid., r. 29).

(q) Ibid., r. 19. The Public Trustee can, in respect of separate trusts, keep separate accounts in the Post Office Savings Bank (Post Office Savings Bank (Public Trustee) Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 52), s. 1 (1)).

(r) Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 14; Public Trustee Rules, 1912, rr. 17, 18, 20—29, 31—37.

(c) Public Trustee Act, 1907 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 11 (4).

450. Where a liability is incurred which the Public Trustee, if he were a private trustee, would be personally liable to discharge, the Consolidated Fund is liable to make good all sums required to discharge it; if, however, the loss is one to which neither the Public Trustee nor any of his officers has in any way contributed, and which neither he nor they could by the exercise of reasonable diligence have averted, neither the Public Trustee nor the Consolidated Fund is subject to any liability in respect of it (d). SECT. 7.
of Liabilities.
Discharge of liabilities.

SECT. 8.—Remuneration.

451. The Public Trustee receives such salary or fees as the Treasury determines (e); and such fees are chargeable to the public in respect of his duties as the Treasury fixes with the sanction of the Lord Chancellor (f). He retains and pays out of any trust property the fees chargeable in respect thereof, and any expenses which might have been retained or paid out of the property, if he had been a private trustee (g). No other reward may be taken by him or any of his officers for discharging the duties of the office (h). Salary and fees.

(d) Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 7.

(e) Ibid., s. 8 (1).

(f) Ibid., s. 9 (1). The fees are arranged from time to time so as to produce annually sufficient to discharge the salaries and incidental expenses under the Act, including a sum to insure the Consolidated Fund against loss (ibid., s. 9 (4)), and are applied in aid of moneys provided by Parliament for expenses under the Act, and so far as not so applied are paid into the Exchequer (ibid., s. 9 (3)). The scale of fees is fixed by the Public Trustee (Fees) Order, 1912 (Stat. R. & O., 1912, Trustee, pp. 1241 et seq.). Where the trust property consists wholly or in part of reversionary interests or property not readily realisable, the Public Trustee may charge an additional fee (ibid., r. 5); and where the circumstances of a trust or estate appear to him to render, or to be likely to render, his duties in relation thereto exceptionally onerous, he may, with the approval of the Treasury, charge a special additional fee, and may make its payment, or the agreement to pay it, a condition of his accepting the trust or administering the estate (ibid., r. 6); and where his duties with regard to a trust or estate appear to be, or to be likely to be, exceptionally simple, or otherwise of an exceptional character, he may, with the approval of the Treasury, remit a part not exceeding one-half of any fee payable in respect thereof (ibid., r. 7).

(g) Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 55), s. 9 (2). The incidence of the fees and expenses as between capital and income is determined by the Public Trustee (ibid., s. 9 (5)). He may in certain cases commute fees, and may, with the approval of the Treasury, agree to any mode of payment of fees which seems to him just and reasonable (Public Trustee (Fees) Order, 1912, rr. 9—11).
